Press "Gag" Is Denied at Minneapolis

No Shortage of Foods Seen in City Under Martial Law.

Minneapolis, July 27 (AP).—National Guardsmen plodded Minneapolis streets today as the city, temporarily and only officially, was on a bread and milk diet for the first day under a military rule provoked by the truck drivers strike.

No shortage existed, however, and no complaints were received that citizens were unable to obtain supplies at groceries and markets. All business save commercial trucking was conducted as usual.

Two suspected Communists, linked by police with the strike, were held for a military court by the National Guard. They were seized almost simultaneously with the announcement by the employers' advisory committee that it refused to reconsider its rejection of mediators' peace terms and would refuse to deal with Communists blamed by them for the walkout.

Replies to "Gag" Charge.

Adjt. Gen. E. A. Walsh, commander of the militia, replied to the charge of the American Civil Liberties Union in New York that Gov. Floyd B. Olson "seeks to gag the press and trample upon the people's right of freedom of speech."

"You can go to the publishers of all the Minneapolis papers and ask them if I said anything about what they could print," said Walsh. "I did not. As a matter of fact, I don't give a tinker's dam what they say. They can criticize all they want."

The Governor, in his proclamation declaring a "state of insurrection" to exist in Minneapolis, made no reference to the press.

Minneapolis newspapers complied with the order for publication of the first military proclamation without charge. Other orders, issued subsequently, also were published free, though such publication was not requested or ordered.

Union leaders went to St. Paul to demand of Gov. Olson that all troops be removed from the city at once. William Brown, president of the union, contended the National Guard interferes with the conduct of the strike and maintained the military rule is illegal.

Impeachment Move Tabled.

Mayor A. G. Bainbridge and Police Chief Michael J. Johannes of Minneapolis, temporarily deposed, cleared the first hurdle in removal proceedings demanded by labor groups when city councilmen tabled a motion seeking impeachment of the Mayor and removal of his appointee.

Additional troops were moved into the city with a full complement of field machine guns, gas guns and automatic rifles, bringing the total force to about 1,200, with some 2,800 held in reserve outside the city.

Permits for truck movement were issued slowly, Adj. Gen. E. A. Walsh said, because the permit section was not completely organized, which accounted for no military passes for grocers' trucks, meat trucks and other vehicles in this and similar categories. News-

Storm Cuts Off Chambersburg

Roads to Pennsylvania Town Blocked, Wires Are Torn Down.

Hagerstown, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—Word was received here late today that Chambersburg, Pa., 40 miles north of here, had suffered a devastating cloudburst. Streets were reported under 3 feet of water. All communication from here is severed and roads leading to Chambersburg are blocked.

Before communication was entirely cut off by the cloudburst, which occurred about 6 p. m., a call was received by the Western Maryland Railroad station here for a work train to repair a serious washout.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. reported all lines south of Chambersburg severed between 6 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. Poles and trees are said to be blocking the road.

Word also came to the Pennsylvania Railroad here that water between Chambersburg and Shippensburg, Pa., had risen almost to the railroad tracks. Unauthenticated reports said severe hail and wind had broken many windows in the town. Elmer Lewis H. Liker, of Greencastle, Pa., reached here to report a barn struck by lightning and destroyed, water 3 feet deep in the town square, and wind raging to cyclonic proportions. Many homes were reported partially under water.

Navy Planes Reach Alaska.

Ketchikan, Alaska, July 27 (AP).—Two of the 12 Navy seaplanes en route from San Diego, Calif., to Dutch Harbor, Alaska, landed here at 1:20 p. m. today from Prince Rupert, British Columbia, where they were forced to an overnight stop yesterday by fog. The others in the flight were expected to follow shortly.

Note Pledges Revenge for Dillinger Trap

Two Women and Surgeon Held After Threat Is Found on Grave.

Chicago, July 27 (AP).—The Government's great nets today enmeshed three key figures in the Dillinger case and were cast out again in efforts to bag the ace outlaw's colleagues in crime.

Federal agents admitted late in the day they had taken Polly Hamilton Keele, the last sweetheart of John Dillinger, into "protective custody." They also held a surgeon suspected of camouflaging the slain gang chief's features, and Mrs. Anna Sage, the mysterious "woman in red," who accompanied him and his girl friend on what proved to be his last night on earth.

Samuel P. Cowley, chief pro tem of the United States Bureau of Investigation in Chicago, declined to discuss the triple detention. The consensus in other quarters, however, was that the Keele girl and the Sage woman were afforded sanctuary lest Dillinger's comrades attempt retribution, on the theory that one of the two women led him into a Federal ambush at a North Side theater Sunday night.

Note Pledges Vengeance.

As a basis for this belief was a cryptic note found on Dillinger's grave in the Crown Hill Cemetery at Indianapolis. It read:

"I am going to get her, John. So long, old boy. J. H."

Acting on this unexpected clew, one arm of the hunt for Hamilton, Homer Van Meter and George Nelson, ranking members of the criminal crew, extended into Indiana.

Uncle Sam's investigators continued their search here. Rumors swept the United States Courthouse that they had found $70,000 in cash and bonds in a Dillinger hideout, just located on the Chicago North Side, near the scene of his slaying. The reports were not confirmed by Cowley or his aids.

No word was forthcoming, either, on the quizzing of the surgeon, suspected of lifting the faces of Dillinger and Van Meter at the home of James Probasco. The manner of his apprehension was not made public, although Probasco had been questioned yesterday before he leaped 19 stories to his death from the Federal agents' Loop headquarters.

Attaches of the coroner's office made another enigmatic visit to the Probasco home late today. A quantity of surgical equipment and a pair of pistols were found there yesterday.

The Federal men were particularly anxious to learn to what extent the Van Meter physiognomy had been altered by a doctor's knife in order that they may have a definite description of his altered appearance. They have vowed to bring him in, together with the other associates of the dead Dillinger.

Italians to Build Chinese Plane Plant

Shanghai, July 27 (AP).—China's efforts to build up a modern war machine has advanced a step, it was revealed here, with circulation of seemingly well-grounded reports today that the national government has contracted with Italian aviation interests for erection of an airplane factory in Kiangsi Province.

It was understood that a training school also was to be established.

Chinese Press Reports 2-Month-Old Octuplets

Canton, China, July 27 (AP).—The Chinese newspapers have accepted as true a report here that octuplets—seven boys and one girl—were born to the wife of Sam Ting, a poor Chinese boatman, and that the mother and children are in good health two months after the birth.

All efforts to verify this record multiple birth have proven unsuccessful so far as foreign correspondents are concerned.

Forest Fires Near Pasadena Take Big Toll

Flames Nearing Mt. Lowe; 2,000 Men Battling Fierce Blaze.

Pasadena, Calif., July 27 (AP).—A stubborn brush and forest fire raged through the canyons and foothills northwest of here today and was reported approaching the Mount Lowe resort area after inflicting damage unofficially estimated at more than $2,500,000.

Two thousand fire fighters struggled to stem the flames, 34 men had been treated for burns.

An advance of the flames toward Pasadena was checked, but United States Forest Supervisor W. V. Mendenhall said there was little hope of controlling the fire before nightfall.

The blaze then had covered more than 1,500 acres.

Residents of the canyon resort areas were ordered to leave their homes.

Guests at Alpine Tavern, $100,000 property on Mount Lowe, were brought down the inclined railway, although it was said there was no actual immediate danger.

Forestry authorities said they knew of no cabins being burned nor any serious threat to residences.

Not many homes are in the immediate fire area, a triangular section on the eastern slope of Arroyo Seco, between Millard and Bear Canyons. This is about 7 miles from the center of Pasadena.

Up the hillsides are large pine and spruce trees, which blaze like giant torches. Some of these are 200 feet high and the ages of some are estimated at 150 years.

Murray Proposes Pump System to Combat Droughts

Gov. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray is one up on Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace as a drought doctor, it was disclosed yesterday.

Gov. Murray doesn't think so much of Secretary Wallace's proposal of a "shelter belt" of trees from Canada to Texas.

He has a counter plan. It calls for a system of artesian wells, or force pumps, through the West.

Roosevelt Inspects Pearl Harbor Base

President Given Reception at Governor's Home.

Honolulu, July 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt took an automobile drive about the city today and went to Pearl Harbor. His luncheon host was Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commandant of the Fourteenth Naval District.

Inspection of the facilities of the Navy's mid-Pacific base was the principal part of the Executive's afternoon program.

Mr. Roosevelt retired to his hotel suite at Waikiki early today, after attending a reception and Hawaiian entertainment in his honor at Washington Place, official residence of the Governor of Hawaii. He had been Gov. Joseph B. Poindexter's guest at dinner.

Fleming Is Director Of Metropolitan Life

Naming of Robert V. Fleming, Washinton banker, as a director of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York, was announced yesterday. Mr. Fleming is president of Riggs National Bank, an office he has held for nine years. He lives in the 2200 block of Wyoming avenue northwest. Of his new appointment, Mr. Fleming said:

"I naturally am very proud of the honor of being named a director of such an important company, and I shall, of course, do my best to serve its interests."

Steel Trade Fears Future Of New Deal

Business Without Profit and "Cracking Down" Fret Leaders.

By Elliott Thurston.

Cleveland, July 27.—Here is the heart of America's Ruhr Valley. Here the depression hit hardest. Such recovery as has taken place can be traced almost entirely to huge outpouring of Government funds, and to the revival in the automobile industry—thanks largely to time payments.

Superficially conditions are good. Parking places are scarce. But basically this center of American heavy industry is far from real recovery. The New Deal is popular with the masses, but not with the leaders. And the outlying farm regions are verging toward revolt.

A composite of what the prominent business and banking leaders think reveals the same fears of the future, of ruinous taxation, of inflation, that exists among New England's business men. Likewise, one finds the same vague but real fear of punitive action from Washington. Here, as farther East, men say they dare not speak their minds openly lest Washington crack down on them. I am told on excellent authority, moreover, that bankers while exhorted by Chairman Jesse Jones, of the RFC, and other authorities in Washington to make loans are sharply criticized by National bank examiners if a liberal loan policy is followed.

Begin to Doubt Roosevelt.

Politically this region, like much of New England, is in ferment. President Roosevelt is admired. He is immune from direct open criticism. But here the Brain Trust is anathema. Gen. Johnson is a symbol for all that is hated in NRA. Prof. Tugwell is a target for farm discontent and the shooting at theorists.

Opposition to the New Deal among leaders in this area is not partisan. There are, of course, many old-line Republicans. But these men are not thinking in terms of party, but of economic salvation. The preponderant view is that the Administration is either deliberately or clumsily preventing recovery. Leaders here say that they want the New Deal to succeed, not only because it is in power for two more years at the very least, but because they see no alternative at this time. And they appear to feel that the time is rapidly passing when Mr. Roosevelt will be able to command confidence, when it will still be possible for him to adopt policy conducive to recovery of private enterprise. Some express the opinion that he has "missed the boat," that it is too late. His signing of the silver bill, of the Frazier-Lemke farm bankruptcy bill, and of the Railroad Labor Act shook much banker-business confidence in this section. These measures are looked upon as further detriments to recovery, and of dubious political advantages.

Twelve Persons Killed In Swiss Plane Crash

Tuettlingen, Wuerttemberg, Germany, July 27 (AP).—Twelve persons, including seven German and two Swiss passengers and the Swiss pilot, copilot and stewardess, were killed today in the crash of a Swiss trimotored airplane.

Evacuation of Haiti Started by Marines

Port-au-Prince, Haiti, July 27 (AP). The United States Marines started leaving this island today, a detachment sailing for Hampton Roads on the U. S. S. Bridge, a Navy transport. Evacuation will be completed by the middle of August.

Tomorrow 120 wives and children of marines will start for New York on the U. S. S. Chateau Thierry.

Vienna Armed Camp; Nazis Gain in South; Food Riots Swell Horror of Civil War

Von Starhemberg Defies Nazis; Brands Them "Desperadoes."

Voices Suspicion Of Hitler Amity

"Resist All Attempts" at Interference, He Cries in Speech.

Vienna, July 27 (AP).—A flat refusal to compromise with National socialism was expressed tonight by Acting Chancellor Ernst von Starhemberg in a nation-wide radio broadcast.

In his first public utterance since succeeding to the office of the slain Chancellor Dollfuss, Prince Starhemberg offered a defiant confession of faith in the mission of Austria as an independent state in the community of nations.

"For myself and on behalf of the federal government," he said, "I declare solemnly that we regard as the holy heritage of our dead chancellor that there can never under any circumstances be any compromise with national socialism."

No Alien Advice Wanted.

The youthful aristocratic Starhemberg declared: "We shall never make any concession that in any way limits the freedom, honor and dignity of the Austrian nation. We have a German mission to perform, but we will not let anybody dictate or even advise or influence us as to how we shall fulfill that mission."

Starhemberg paid glowing tribute to Austria's dead leader whose heritage, he said, could be summed up in one word—Austria.

"This one word gives us strength to overcome every difficulty, to master a situation that is seemingly ungovernable, and to make the impossible possible," he said.

Asks National Unity.

"Believe in Austria's future, my hearers," he said. "Resist all attempts to mix into your affairs from outside. Do not depart one inch from the way prescribed by Dollfuss, just as the federal cabinet will not depart one inch from it."

Starhemberg decried the Nazis as "desperadoes and irresponsible elements." He said "our leader is dead, but the idea he stood for lives more today than ever. With the exception of a few insignificant places order prevails throughout Austria and in a few more hours even these places will have unequivocal order and law."

Starhemberg stated Austria was absolutely opposed "to all forms of bolshevism, even that form which is camouflaged under nationalistic colorings. Austria is fighting against barbarism of the twentieth century."

Touching upon the conflict with Germany he declared emphatically: "We have never given occasion for conflict with the Reich. We

Mrs. Dall Eligible For Suit Monday

Divorce Action in Minden Held Possible.

Reno, Nev., July 27 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall will complete her required six-weeks divorce residence in Nevada next Monday.

Attorneys representing President and Mrs. Roosevelt's only daughter have declined to reveal when or where the expected suit against Curtis B. Dall will be filed, but it was regarded as possible the complaint will be filed at Minden, 50 miles south of here, Monday morning.

The hearing, which is expected to be conducted privately, could be held a few minutes later before District Judge Clark J. Guild.

Stratosphere Flight to Start At Dawn if Weather Permits

Rapid City, S. Dak., July 27 (AP).—Two daring fliers tonight prepared to take off at dawn tomorrow on a long awaited flight into the mysterious stratosphere.

Culminating more than six weeks of preparations, Maj. William E. Kepner announced that the flight would begin tomorrow unless unfavorable weather develops. He hoped to be ready to leave by 4:30 a. m., but warned the exact time could not be fixed.

Accompanied by Capt. Albert W. Stevens as observer, Maj. Hepner plans to pilot the huge free balloon, largest in the world, at least 15 miles into the upper air. More than a ton of delicate instruments will be carried aloft.

As decision was made to start the flight a trained crew of 120 men began inflation of the huge craft. Special tubes were laid out to pipe 200,000 cubic feet of compressed hydrogen into the balloon, while all precautions were taken to prevent accident.

A gusty wind was dipping into the 500-foot natural bowl in the Black Hills, 11 miles west of here, as the inflation started. Capt. Orvil A. Anderson, alternate pilot, was in charge.

Although the craft has a gas capacity of 3,000,000 cubic feet, Capt. Anderson explained that less than one-tenth of that amount will be necessary to start the journey. As the balloon reaches the upper air this gas will expand and fill the bag to capacity.

While the flight, sponsored by the National Geographic Society and the United States Army Air Corps, was originally planned as a two-man venture, it became known late this afternoon that Capt. Anderson also might be taken along.

Von Papen Selection Held Master Stroke

Berlin, July 27 (AP).—The appointment of Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen as minister to Austria, with instruction to report personally to Chancellor Hitler, was viewed in the Reich today as a master political stroke.

The German press and government officials pointed with satisfaction to the enthusiasm with which official Austria received the news that the conservative, non-Nazi member of the government is going to Vienna.

The action was taken to mean that Hitler is emphasizing his intention to preserve a stricter neutrality toward Austria, and that he is turning ill will into good will.

Hitler, Von Papen and other government members conferred in Beyreuth today, and Von Papen returned by airplane to Berlin tonight.

Von Papen went to his home, where he conferred with his secretaries. The time of his departure for Vienna was not announced, but

Rains Break Torrid Wave; D. C. Peak 90

Death Toll Reaches 1,429; Crop and Live Stock Loss Is Heavy.

10 a. m.	80	4 p. m.	88
11 a. m.	86	5 p. m.	85
Noon	87	6 p. m.	81
1 p. m.	88	7 p. m.	80
2 p. m.	89	8 p. m.	78
3 p. m.	90	9 p. m.	77

Widespread rains yesterday brought relief to the major portion of the Nation, which for more than a week has suffered under an intense heat wave that claimed 1,429 lives and damaged crops and livestock to the extent of millions of dollars.

Washington's maximum temperature yesterday was 90 degrees recorded at 3 p. m. Today will be cloudy, possibly cooler, and punctuated with occasional thundershowers, the Weather Bureau predicted.

Yesterday's minimum was 74, recorded at 5 a. m. The humidity, which averaged well above 60, caused considerable discomfort here, although no heat prostrations were reported by police or the hospitals.

In the drought-ridden areas, the moisture was far from adequate, the Associated Press reported, and most of the parched fields in the Middle West and the Great Plains received merely a surface wetting which failed to reach the sub-soil. On the Chicago Board of Trade prices were higher for all grains.

Crop experts continued to predict greatly decreased yields of all staple grains because of the ravages of drought, heat, insect pests and reduced acreages, the Associated Press asserted.

Luke Lea, Jr., Gets N. C. Parole Today

Raleigh, N. C., July 27 (U.P.).—Luke Lea, jr., who is serving a sentence in the North Carolina Penitentiary for violating the State banking laws, will be paroled tomorrow, it was announced tonight.

Lea, his father, Luke Lea, sr., former United States Senator, and Wallace B. Davis were convicted of conspiracy to violate the State's banking laws in connection with the collapse of the Central Bank & Trust Co., of Asheville. Davis was president.

7 Injured as Strikers Fight Kohler Deputies

Kohler, Wis., July 27 (U.P.).—Streets of America's model industrial village became a battle ground today as strikers and deputy marshals clashed twice in front of the plant owned by former Gov Waller J. Kohler.

In the second fight several hundred pickets hurled rocks and stones at deputies. One officer, Max Schultz, was injured when a flying brick struck him on the head. Six others suffered lesser injuries.

Estimates of Dead and Wounded Run Up to 3,000.

Father and Son Pitted to Death

Socialists Jubilant as Fascists Fall on Both Sides.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Vienna, July 27.—Nervous expectation of some vital action prevailed in Austria tonight after a day of fierce fighting in which hundreds of men were killed and wounded.

Alarming reports of Nazi military successes in the province of Carinthia were accompanied by appeals for reinforcements of the loyal Heimwehr troops.

The general feeling of uncertainty was heightened by unverified rumors that Italian troops were crossing the border, which brought official denial from Rome.

Cabinet Heavily Guarded.

The cabinet, headed by Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, had been in session continuously for eight hours, protected by heavy guards.

Estimates of the dead and wounded, not including many regular army casualties, ran up to nearly 3,000.

The government was hard put to answer S O S calls for aid against the Nazis in sections where the rebels were winning.

Loyal forces—Heimwehrmen and soldiers—were reported to have recaptured St. Veit in Carinthia, killing 50 Nazis. The government also claimed to have stormed Feldkirchen successfully.

Nazi forces were reported in complete control of the Tauern Railway tunnel connecting Carinthia with Salzburg.

Government forces were said to be doing better in Styria than in Carinthia, but were not in complete control.

Socialists, Reds Expectant.

Socialists and Communists warned "our hour will come," as their Fascist enemies killed each other.

Communications with the centers of disturbance in Sryia and Carinthia were cut off except for the government radio, leaving the public in doubt as to the extent of the slaughter.

Headquarters of the Fascist Heimwehr (home guard) here estimated that 2,500 Nazis had been killed and wounded.

They said 180 Heimwehr men died defending the government of Von Starhemberg up to last midnight, but had no estimates of the toll today. The best available estimates put the dead well above 500.

Government officials, battling desperately to solve their own problems

Hitler Snubbed By Pope Pius

Vatican City, July 27 (U.P.).—Strained relations between the Holy See and Nazi Germany neared the breaking point tonight, following revelation of a snub of Chancellor Adolf Hitler by Pope Pius XI.

The snub was in a papal letter, refusing patronage to Hitler's Arbeitsfront, or labor front, organization. The approval was refused because of the organization's allegedly "anti-Catholic attitude."

The papal snub to Hitler occurred when the Vatican refused a request from the Arbeitsfront for a photograph of Vatican relics for their October festivals, depicting historic German scenes.

Formal letters sent by Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, on behalf of the Pope, to the labor organization said:

"The holy father can not grant your request for a photograph of objects in the Vatican Museum, not alone on account of the non-Catholic attitude of the Arbeitsfront, but even more because of the anti-Catholic policy visible in the current year's program."

The Holy See also is prepared for a severe attack on the Austrian Nazis for refusal to permit the late Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss to receive religious comfort while dying.

D. C. Employer Denies Claim Of Kick-Back

Former U. S. Official Said to Have Influenced Contract Letting.

Startling testimony allegedly connecting a former Government official with influencing the letting of a subcontract and a flat denial of the employer on the same job of an alleged "kick back" of wages were heard yesterday at the hearing being conducted by Senator Walsh's "kick-back" investigating committee.

Earlier in the day labor representatives asked the committee that the Navy Department be required to withhold awards for $50,000,000 worth of ship construction, scheduled for August 15, until means could be taken to protect the workers who will be employed in building the vessels.

Other developments at the hearing included an accusation that there had been a breakdown in the 1933 naval construction program, because only about one-third of the progress promised for the first 12 months has been performed.

Walsh Urges Cash to Be Held.

A further development was a suggestion from Senator Walsh that consideration should be given legislation which would enable Government departments to withhold payments due contractors for construction work, pending the settlement of disputes between contractors and workmen over prevailing wage scales.

The flat denial of a "kick-back" came from T. C. Steucke, general manager of the Alexandria Iron Works, which had a subcontract for work connected with the construction of a power plant for St. Elizabeths Hospital last autumn and winter. He refuted the testimony of three iron workers that they had returned about half of one week's pay on his request.

It was about this job that H. Herfurth, Washington contractor, told the committee that Maximillian von Pagenhardt, at that time employed by the Interior Department as consulting engineer on the job, suggested that the subcontract for the iron work be let to the Alexandria Iron Works.

Workers Charge Graft.

Mr. Herfurth said, "Mr. Von Pagenhardt mentioned the Alexandria Iron Works and said as there were nine other contractors on the job, all using nonunion labor, it would disorganize the work if I were to

Legal Liquor Tied Up In $17,250,000 Suit

Seattle, July 27 (AP).—Liquor valued at more than $200,000, imported legally into the United States by the Reifel Brewery interests, of British Columbia, has been tied up here by the Federal Government in connection with the Government's $17,250,000 civil suit against Henry Reifel and his son, George.

Troops Patrol Vienna; Nazi Gains Reported

while Italian troops waited at the border to step over if necessary, professed to believe Vienna was not in danger, but no precautions were overlooked.

The capital city, in which the Nazi putsch of Wednesday killed Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, echoed with the sounds of marching feet and the clang of steel weapons.

Strong detachments of the Heimwehr protected districts in which government buildings are located. Machine gun companies commanded the Ballhausplatz, huge square before the chancellery.

From a position atop the "Hochhaus," Vienna's skyscraper, machine-gunners were ready to pour deadly fire into the ranks of rebels if they should attempt a march against the seat of government.

Peace Pleas in Vain.

Desperate pleas for peace seemed for the time to avail nothing.

Loudly, emphatically—over the radio, in the press and by handbills scattered from airplanes—the government sought to allay the disturbances and induce the rebels to lay down arms.

"Von Papen is coming!" was the slogan of the government.

The government hoped that the fact that Chancellor Hitler of Germany is sending his conservative, Catholic, non-Nazi and aristocratic colleague here as a special minister would stop the Nazis—would convince them that they had no hope of aid from the Third Reich.

But the southern rebels were paying little or no attention—they believed nothing they heard or read.

They fought on in ignorance of the true state of affairs in the capital. The government itself was in doubt as to exactly what was happening in some areas.

More Troops Demanded.

Calls for reinforcements were coming in from the province of Carinthia even as the guard in the capital itself was being strengthened and candles were being passed out in preparation for a possible cutting off of the electric light plants.

Carinthia wanted all the men available. Already orders had gone out for every ablebodied man not in active service to be ready for a call to the colors.

The Heimwehr was in bad position to answer these S O S calls because it felt that the 6,000 men here were needed for possible defense of the capital.

"Prsonally I don't believe any attack is seriously planned," said one of the officers in Ballhausplatz over the telephone before communication with the chancellery was cut off.

Nazi Raiders Still Held.

There were reports, he added, that the Nazis were planning "another foolhardy attempt to surprise and imprison us." He referred to Wednesday's putsch, in which 144 Nazis were able to seize the government building.

The 144, who were promised safe conduct to Germany but were arrested when it developed that Dollfuss had been shot to death, still were held today. There were reports, unconfirmed, that eight had been executed without trial. Plans were said to have been made to hang 30 others, but this lacked confirmation.

The pitched battles in the southern provinces were for possession of various towns and railway lines, and were complicated and made more tragic by hunger riots.

Nazis Reported Gaining.

The Nazis were reported gaining at some points and to have hopes of bringing at least part of the regular army over to their side, but the soldiers, so far as could be learned, still were aiding the Heimwehr, despite the jealousy which exists between the two groups.

The government claimed that in Styria, where artillery was brought into use yesterday to oust Nazis from tht City of Loeben, the revolt was completely crushed.

But even the official account was not extremely optimistic regarding Carinthia.

Austrian legionnaires rom Bavaria officially were said to have attempted to invade the country, but to have been pushed back over the German border.

The wounded included many regular army men who had been shot in the legs by the Nazi. They deliberately avoided wounding them fatally in the hope they would change sides.

Nazi Leaders Lose Control.

Some Nazi leaders, realizing the desperature nature of their situation, were seeking to bring about peace, but appeared to have lost control of their troops in the provinces.

One leader in Vienna said he and his colleagues were in the dark as to what was happening in the provinces and they were hoping the appointment of Von Papen would bring about the end of hostilities.

"Hitler undoubtedly is sincerely desirous to cooperate in restoring peace here," said the leader. "The difficulty naturally is to reach the ears of the fighters in time.

"The Nazis in the provinces are supremely skeptical of all radio announcements or newspaper communiques from the Vienna government.

Skepticism Is Rife.

In Loeben even a Heimwehr patrol man laughted at the report that Von Papen is coming. A more favorable reaction was found, however, in Bruckonmur and Kallwang.

"Von Papen can not stop the taxes which, after this fighting, will ruin everybody," was the caustic comment of a Loeben merchant.

The government itself carried on the propaganda of "peace through Von Papen" before it received official verification that the German vice chancellor was coming. Press reports that the man who out in criticism of Nazi radicals is coming were received with enthusiasm and acted upon at once.

Hitler's letter to Von Papen, expressing confidence in him and a desire for better relations with Austria was given the widest possible distribution.

Some government officials, however, privately expressed fear that Hitler would not be able to influence the rebellious Nazis.

In support of this view it was stated that Nazis in small detachments crossed the borderf rom Germany and were pused back.

Socialists Issue Call.

The Socialists and Communists took advantage of the situation to denounce "all Fascism," meaning both Von Starhemberg's party and the Nazis.

The central committee of the revolutionary Socialists proclaimed that the hour for the anti-Fascists to strike will come.

"What happened in Austria July 25," said this proclamation, in the form of a handbill, "essentially resembled what happened in Germany June 30.

In both cases Fascists murdered Fascists. Here, as well as there, it means the beginning of the end of Fascist domination.

"Our hour approaches! Be ready for action."

Socialist headquarters secretly circulated a communique stating that every unbiased observer in Austria "must admit the death of Dollfuss was received by the masses with undisguised joy at the death of a pirate who scarcely a day before had caused a young workingman to be hanged."

Nazi Cleric Killed.

Tragic incidents of the fighting in the south filtered through today. Loeben reported that a Nazi clergyman, occupying a rifle post in the steeple of his church, was killed by a bullet from the government attackers.

At Koellerschlag, the leader of a group of Nazis who had slipped in from Germany ran up to an inspector of gendarmerie, threw his arounds around him and cried, "Why, we are friends!"

As the inspector tried to push him away, the Nazi stabbed him in the abdomen.

Then the inspector fired six shots, but fell himself with a bullet in the heart.

Son Against Father.

In the fight that followed, the son of a Kollerschlag restaurant keeper, who recently joined the Austrian Legionnairies, was killed as he tried to throw a hand grenade into his father's house.

The legionnaires retreated into Germany, but took eight prisoners with them. Four Nazis were killed in the fight and two were captured.

After a battle which started at 2 p. m. Wednesday, government troops gained control of the Phyrn Paes near Liezen today. Eighteen men were killed.

Saltzburg reported Nazis and government troops locked in a battle for possession of the Lueg Pass, which controls traffic between Salzburg and upper Austria.

Nazis dynamited bridges and railways in several strategic places to hinder government movements.

Italian Troops Ready.

The fighting extended to the town of Hsiakyted Villach, half an hour from the Italian border. There 48,000 Italian troops were marking time and waiting for orders, ready to cross the frontier if necessary to restore peaceful conditions.

Loeben detachments of Heimwehrmen were heavily reinforced to repulse an attack reported to have been planned by the Nazis after they were driven out last night. A child and a woman were among the dead there, and 16 attackers were officially stated to have been killed. The number of Nazi dead was not estimated.

"Soldiers were mowed down like pigeons," an officer said. One group walked into an ambush of Nazis, who fired at their legs.

Every hospital in the area was jammed. Many wounded were taken to other buildings. Bullet holes were in nearly every wall, and terror was written on the faces of the populace.

Eye-Witness Tells Story.

An eye-witness told of the capture of Ratgersburg, Styria, yesterday by Heimwehr men. They forced Nazis over the Yugoslavian border without firing a shot.

"As they ran over the broad stone bridge leading into Yugoslavia," he said, "many dropped rifles and machine guns into the river. Some of them tore off their Nazi Storm Troop uniforms.

"The father of one Nazi who escaped was a member of the Heimwehr forces. That is the tragedy of the whole situation in Austria. Civil war means father against son, brother against brother.

"The Ratgersburg affair is particularly tragic to any Austrian, as Yugoslavs across the river could watch us fighting among ourselves. After the war they captured Ratgersburg, and civilians helped the Aurtrian army drive them out.

"Then yesterday Yugoslavian soldiers saw an Austrian army take the town from its inhabitants."

Several Die in Shooting In Streets of Vienna

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Vienna, July 27 (U.P.).—Shooting broke out in the streets of Vienna tonight, following a day in which the Nazi rebellion spread through the countryside, keeping the nation in chaos.

The capital's superficial calm in the center of the Austrian storm was shattered by firing in Meidling street, in the Twelfth Ward, and in Schoenbrunn street, in the Fifth Ward.

Steel-helmeted Heimwehr (home guards) and police aided regular army forces in determined offensives on scattered fronts to repel the civil warfare, which took a swiftly increasing toll of lives.

Several persons were reliably reported to have been killed and others wounded in an exchange of fire when police mixed with a mob of Nazis, Socialists and Communists in Engels Square.

Machine guns late in the afternoon were installed in windows of the chancellery.

Loyal spies reported a band of upward of 100 Nazis, wearing the Heimwehr uniform, entered the inner district of the capital, intending tonight to seize the chancellery and cabinet in another desperate effort to gain control of the government.

U. S. Approves Arms Shipment To Chaco War

$615,000 in Materials to Bolivia Expected From Embargo.

The United States Government approved the last shipment of arms and other death-dealing equipment from manufacturerse here to th Chaco war zone under terms of the embargo of May 28.

The State Department announced that $615,000 in munitions, aircraft and other war materials under contract to Bolivia had been excepted from terms of the embargo.

At the same time, Secretary of State Hull ruled that the prohibition on the sale of arms would apply to $2,550,421 additional war supplies ordered by Bolivia.

Both Envoys Satisfied.

Both the Paraguayan Minister, Dr. Enrique Bordenave, who considered it "not so bad" for his country, and the Bolivian Minister, Dr. Enrique Finot, who refused to comment, apparently were satisfied by the settlement.

In exercising the discretionary powers given him by the President, Mr. Hull reviewed all of the $3,165,000 in contracts still unsettled and based his exceptions on those that were almost fulfilled at the time the embargo became effective.

Declaring the Secretary could find no "valid reason" for all other incompleted contracts with Bolivia or its agent, the Lloyd Aereo Boliviano, the department clamped down the embargo on these orders:

American Armaments Corporation, 8,000 rounds of ammunition contracted for $97,000 May 23, and 9,000 aerial bombs and 25,000 rounds of ammunition contracted for $1,550,500 on May 25, just before the embargo.

United Aircraft Exports, Inc., parts and miscellaneous materials, approximately $25,000.

Further Sales Barred.

All further sales of arms to either Bolivia or Paraguay will be barred without exception, the department said, adding that "the final and definitive decision thus reached by this Government has today been communicated to the British government and the secretary of the League of Nations at Geneva."

In explanation of the fact that no sales of munitions to Paraguay were brought to light, the Paraguayan Minister said his country purchased $94,000 worth last year under a contract that terminated before the embargo. By way of further explanation, he added that Paraguay has captured Bolivin arms valued at "more thn $4,000,000."

Senator Pope Backs Order.

Senator James P. Pope, Idaho Democrat, a member of the Nye munitions investigation committee, said the State Department exceptions appear justified. Earlier he had written Secretary Hull urging "strict compliance" with the embargo, pointing out that the United States holds 11.7 per cent of the world's munitions trade.

"The action of the State Department in making exceptions of shipments of certain airplanes to Bolivia and refusing shipments of other airplanes and munitions based on legal and equitable considerations seems justified," he said.

"Bolivia has certainly been treated fairly and even generously in the decision. It should be understood, however, that in the future no exceptions from the President's proclamation will be made to either Bolivia or Paraguay.

"In the interest of humanity and civilization, these nations should immediately agree to a permanent peace and if they refuse to do so on a fair basis they shoud be denied the means of prolonging war."

ReichApplauds Von Papen as Vienna Envoy

Vice Chancellor Expected to Improve Relations With Austria.

it was indicated it would not be tonight.

The appointment of Von Papen brought him back into the limelight again after several weeks of comparative obscurity which followed reports that he was being forced out of the cabinet.

Naturally, becoming an extraordinary envoy to Austria removes the critic of some Nazi policies from the cabinet, but does it in such a manner as to give hopes to Hitler's friends that he gained rather than lost by the move.

Von Papen succeeds Kurt Rieth, who was summarily recalled for taking a part in guaranteeing the killers of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss safe conduct to Germany. He acted without authorization in this matter.

Habicht Also Ousted.

Another indication that Hitler is leaning strongly away from the radical elements in relation to Austria was the dismissal of Theodore Habicht, Austrian Nazi in Germany.

Both actions were regarded here as likely to mollify other powers, which are critical of what many charge amounts to German interference in the internal affairs of the neighboring country.

Hitler was reported to have been ready to call upon the Reichswehr (regular army) if necessary to prevent a wholesale march of Austrian Nazi refugees from Munich into their home country, to take part in the rebellion there.

Nazi Putsch Halted.

That the chancellor went to Munich and took part in preventing such a movement appeared well established.

Domestic interest centered tonight in the vacancy as vice chancellor. Much speculation gave the post to Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier, minister of air and holder of a number of other jobs.

An Austrian Nazi leader at Munich, while insisting that his country must have a government which will cooperate with Germany, said in an interview today that Von Papen's appointment augured well for better relations between the Nazis and Catholics.

Protestants Rush War on Indecent Films

50,000 Pledge Cards to Be Distributed by Churches in Campaign.

The war against "indecent" movies took another step forward in the District yesterday when the printing of 50,000 pledge cards, to be distributed among participants in the campaign of the Protestant churches, was authorized at a meeting held in the office of Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the Washington Federation of Churches committee on civic affairs.

In order to provide speakers for every Protestant organization during the drive, a speakers' bureau was formed. Protestant clergymen have designated Sunday, October 12, for concerted attention to movies. Mrs. W. O. Tufts and Mrs. F. A. Linzel were instructed to act as a committee representing Protestant women's groups.

"An erroneous view seems to prevail in some quarters that our objective is dull, uninteresting movies, and that we are opposed to motion pictures in general," said La Roe after the meeting.

"The truth is we are strong believers in movies of the right kind, but we are convinced a picture doesn't have to be ditry to be interesting."

La Roe said arrangements are being made for a joint meeting September 11 of representatives of Catholic and Jewish groups cooperating in the campaign.

Plans for Post Annex Ready

Work to Be Started Soon on 6-Story Building.

Plans for construction of a six-story building as a west wing of the present Washington Post Building were announced yesterday by The Post management following approval of the design by the Fine Arts Commission.

The building, which will replace the former Chinese-American Restaurant, will be used to take care of the expansion of the various Post departments.

New presses will be installed on the ground floor, and part of the mechanical equipment will be transferred to the new wing.

The front of the building will be done in Indiana limestone to conform with the architecture of the main Post plant. It will be 25 feet across and 85 feet deep.

Construction will start in the immediate future.

Italians Scorn All Diplomacy In Austrian Row

Rome, July 27 (U.P.).—Italy has no intention of participating in any diplomatic action to obtain Austrian independence, permitting her army moves on the Austrian border to speak for themselves, it was authoritatively learned tonight.

The government has neither taken nor will it take any diplomatic steps in Berlin, as reported falsely abroad, it was insisted. Italy sees no reason to cooperate in further diplomatic action, because her attitude is clearly demonstrated by measures of a military character adopted since Wednesday night.

Authorities were silent on appointment by Adolf Hitler of Franz von Papen as his special envoy to Vienna during the crisis.

have done everything to fasten the bonds of blood and culture which tie us to the German nation. At the same time I must declare emphatically that we shall never yield Austria's honor and that we shall resist every attempt to limit the liberty and independence of our fatherland."

Prince Starhemberg rejected the attempts "of certain forces outside Austria to unload the responsibility for this week's events from themselves onto others."

Skeptical of Hitler.

Obviously referring to Hitler's offer of peace, he observed coolly:

"We have suffered too much in the past to not look skeptically at protestations of friendship. We shall wait reservedly to see whether peace will follow the word."

He promised that the disturbers of Austria would be dealt with summarily but justly. In conclusion he stated his confidence in taking over the government until final decisions with reference to the formation of a cabinet had been made rested upon the fact that members of Chancellor Dollfuss' old guard, especially Kurt Schuschnigg and Emil Fey, stood at his side.

Power of U. S. To Check Greif, Says Johnson

Believes Federal Court Has No Control Over Use of Blue Eagle.

Agua Caliente, Mexico, July 27 (AP).—If the facts justify, the government will use its powers to prevent L. Greif & Bros., Baltimore clothing manufacturers, from using the Blue Eagle label in its garments, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA head, said today.

Gen. Johnson, on vacation here, talked by long-distance telephone with Washington this morning for more than an hour before making his statement.

"In the first place, I don't believe the Federal Court has the power to enjoin the NRA from lifting the Blue Eagle," he told the interviewers. "The emblem is the property of the Government, is copyrighted and the Government has full control.

"But if through some technicality the firm does retain the Blue Eagle against our wishes, and I find the facts justify drastic action, I will go on the air and tell the people of the United States the facts and the reason why the Blue Eagle was lifted.

"I can not say that I am familiar with all the facts at this distance but I do know that the Blue Eagle is the only protection against sweatshop methods and the American public has come to understand that the Blue Eagle in a garment means that the garment was not made in a sweatshop."

1 Dies, More Hurt As Bomb Explodes In Paris Subway

Paris, July 27 (AP).—A bomb wrapped in two cracker boxes exploded today in a Paris subway, killing a station master and seriously injuring a conductor.

Police feared they were dealing again with the "three judges of hell," mysterious bombers, whose activities terrified the city several weeks ago, but an examination of the remnants of the infernal machine yielded no clew as to its origin.

The bomb was taken from one cracker box, and the station master was cutting the string about an inner box as the charge exploded. He was killed and the windows of a car were shattered. Several passengers were injured by bits of glass.

Austrian Nazis Disband Along Bavaria Border

Hitler Troops Reported Acting to Prevent Invasion.

Munich, July 27 (AP).—There was indication tonight of secret demobilization of disappointed Austrian Nazis all along the Bavarian frontier.

This was after official denials that there were "any operations" to be called off.

Black-uniformed Schutz Staffel men were on hand to see to it that the brown-uniformed Austrians did not disobey the reported order from Chancellor Hitler not to attempt a ninvasion of their home country.

Something like 45,000 S. S. men were said to have been sent to an Austrian Nazi camp at Freilassing to prevent anything rash being done.

There was bewilderment and grumbling at the border.

The Austrians had been waiting for a long time for the day when they would march back home and clear out their political enemies.

They had looked onward to a grand homecoming, and if that was lacking, had professed themselves ready to "die for Hitler."

Some, on the other hand, think Hitler was right in forbidding an invasion of the homeland. Even those who did not think so appeared to be obeying him with the exception of one group reported in Vienna to have crossed the border when no one was looking.

The border is 500 kilometers long. It has proved a difficult job to watch every meter of it.

The Munich barracks suddenly became empty today and 3,000 men were sent back to Lechfeld, where the largest Austrian Nazi encampment is located.

There was one report that the Reichswehr (regular army) is supervising the disarming of the Austrians.

Fire Apparatus Order Pdaced

District to Replace Old Equipment at Cost of $27,976.

Contract to replace aged and outworn fire apparatus was awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners to the Gamewell Co., of Newton, Mass., for $27,976.

The company was the only bidder and offered an allowance of $1,300 on the old District apparatus it will replace. The new apparatus is to be delivered within 120 days.

The old apparatus which is to be replaced has been in use for as long as 27 years. It was installed in the District Building when it was constructed and occupied by the municipal government.

Walter E. Kern, electrical engineer of the District, urged purchase of new apparatus as a safeguard against breakdown of the worn equipment. It was this danger which prompted District officials to insert the requested item in the District appropriation bill at the last moment when it was before the Senate District Appropriations subcommittee.

War Improbable Just for Dollfuss, France Declares

Paris, July 27 (AP).—The view that war as a result of the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss is "impossible" was expressed today by the French foreign office.

Rather, it was said, the French view is that peace was strengthened by failure of the Nazis to seize the government.

Other officials interpreted the events as a "striking defeat" for Chancellor Hitler of Germany.

The French, pledged to the maintenance of Austrian independence, have taken no active steps. They regard any move as unnecessary at this time.

Steel Makers Fret in Dread Of Bare Future

Cleveland Trust Co., echoes the prevailing banker-business opinion in this territory in explaining why the durable goods industry, which centers here—and is responsible for the great bulk of existing unemployment—fails to revive.

Threat to Profits Hampers.

"There are two great obstacles which block the way to a prompt resumption of the normal production of durable goods," he recently declared before the Machinery and Allied Products Institute. "The first of these is the pervading fear that the extension of governmental regulation over the details of business operations will make it impossible for many corporations to make profits. . . .

"This condition seriously hampers recovery because it deadens business initiative. In normal times the corporations are the best customers of the durable goods industries. All manufacturing plants and their machinery, all the equipment of transportation, communication, and the public utilities, and all office appliances, are provided by the durable goods industries. They are getting along as best they can with what they had before the depression, and they will try to continue that policy until they have reasonable confidence that it is going to be possible for them to make profits in the future.

"The second great obstacle preventing the recovery of the durable goods industries is the fear about the future of our money. This fear restricts and almost prevents long-term financing by means of bond issues and mortgages which normally provide funds for purchasing durable goods. During all of 1933 the production of durable goods was restricted by lack of adequate financing, and it seems probable that the influences that checked investment in them last year will continue through 1934."

Normal Market Stifled.

He estimates that there is an accumulated lag of $85,000,000,000 in construction, equipment, maintenance and replacement, which would absorb durable goods. The sum is staggering. But it serves to bring out forcibly how feeble and futile are the attempts to substitute the spending of Government funds, though they run into billions, for this vast normal flow of private capital.

"We now have huge shortages that need to be made good," he added. "We have millions of idle workers seeking jobs. We have money and credit seeking employment. Always heretofore that combination has produced prosperity. This time the barriers that are blocking the way to recovery are of our own making.

"We have lifted wages and shortened hours in the simple faith that expanding production would make it possible to pay for them, despite the unvarying records of economic experience which show that increased production must come first so as to earn profits that make possible higher wages and shorter hours. We have strangled the flow of investment funds when they are needed as never before. We have sought to raise prices by debasing our money with the result that capital prefers idle security over the hazards of enterprise. We have shortages, workers and money in abundance. In order to go to work we need profit possibilities, investment freedom and monetary confidence."

Dread Inflation.

This accurately reflects what I find to be the dominant view among bankers, industrialists, editors and other leaders hereabouts. It is far milder than what they say off the record. They have little faith in the new governmental substitutes—the bill to stimulate building, the act to provide industrial loans. Neither holds out prospects of any material volume of new activity. Both, it is felt, are palliatives which avoid the basic problem of reviving private capital enterprise.

Not only have the Government spendings, huge though they are, failed to "prime the pump," in restoring the heavy industries, according to opinion here, but as time progresses fear grows that the Federal budget will crack—that reckless inflation will be inescapable.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland mirrors the state of affairs and the opinion. Guardedly the bank's business reviews point to the prostration of normal credit supplies. Bank credit flows only into more and more Government bonds. Member banks through this region have expanded credit, to be sure. But, as the Reserve bank's last review cited, "the expansion was due entirely to increased holdings of Government securities."

Business Credits Drop.

How long can this go on? A few days ago the Cleveland Trust Co. issued a chart showing how the Government borrowing from the banks has gone steadily upward, while business borrowing from the banks has gone down in exactly the same ratio. The lines crossed in 1933. They have separated since, the Federal borrowings mounting ever higher on the chart, the business borrowings dropping ever lower. The Cleveland bank remarks that this is "diquieting."

Yet the Government's spending of this money on relief, in all the countless ways that have been devised, has stimulated the so-called consumption goods, chiefly cheap ones. The retail stores are doing a fairly thriving business. People here, as in New England, are buying automobiles on time. That, in turn, has helped the industries which make parts, and has provided some outlet for steel and iron.

Yet this is but superficial recuperation. In this industrial region, comparable to the Ruhr as a great steel and iron center, there can be no real or lasting economic health until the basic industries revive. Their leaders believe firmly that they would revive if Washington would permit—if the President gave positive assurance that the "brain trust" is not going to destroy profits, that our money is not going to be demoralized, that the budget is not going to be wrecked and exorbitant taxes levied.

Fears Eclipse Partisanship.

But of these things the men in this area who determine policy for great industries and banks are apprehensive—increasingly so as time passes. The same sense of ultimate disaster hangs over this region as it does over New England. It is not merely partisan. These men see no remedy in time at the polls. It is far wider and deeper and is shared equally by the prominent Democrats and Republicans.

A good many—though the number steadily diminishes, so I am informed—still cling to the hope that the President not only will recognize what needs to be done to "restore confidence" but that, regardless of immediate political expediency, he will have the firmness to do it.

At the moment, his popularity is not seriously, though it is somewhat, impaired. His hold on the great majority of voters seems secure. But the farmers are growing bitter, as AAA experimentation, processing taxes, hog killing and crop destruction are made a mockery by the severe drought which spread its blight to this country. One hears many echoes of Scripture to the effect that the drought was an act of Divine retribution. And the farmers resent the widening disparity of prices. The mail-order catalogues show prices of what farmers buy going higher and higher, while farm income falls hopelessly behind.

And the upper crusts of the social-economic order here, a minority though they are, are definitely hostile, increasingly uneasy. All is far from well in the American Ruhr.

Center of Fighting in Austria

they would scale into the millions for both livestock and crops. Many crops have been declared lost, even with continued rains.

As temperatures in the great Mississippi Valley became considerably lower, the number of heat deaths declined proportionately. Cooler weather and persistent showers were forecast for most of the States last night.

Hardest hit of all the States, Missouri increased its list of heat victims yesterday by 34, making a total there during the current heat wave of 412, according to the Associated Press. Ohio added 13, making 176; Illinois added eight, making 370, and Indiana added five, making 83.

Arkansas Gets Rain.

A 60day period of drought was broken by heavy showers in Arkansas, which benefited some crops and replenished the water supply which had become dangerously low in some sections.

The Pacific Coast, which had basked in balmy temperatures while the rest of the Nation was sweltering, reported its hottest day of the month. San Diego had 79, Spokane 96, Portland 63, San Francisco 73 and Los Angeles 94.

New York reported 86, but getting warmer, while New Jersey and Pennsylvania had 88, with a prediction of showers. New England, in the mid 60's and 70's, also looked for rain, the Associated Press said.

The Southeast coast had warmer weather, as did the Gulf States.

A mountain cloudburst, thundering in the highlands near Canon City, Colo., was held responsible for a train wreck which killed one and injured 11.

U. S. Minister to Denmark Will Come to U. S.

Copenhagen, July 27 (AP).—Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, United States Minister to Denmark, left here today on the motor liner Steko for a visit to Greenland.

She was accompanied by Miss Helen Lee Doherty, a member of her staff(and Mr. Daugaard-Jenson, Governor of Greenland. The govrenor said he will escort Mrs. Owen to a wild and rugged section of western Greenland. She said she was particularly anxious to see how Eskimos live.

From Greenland Mrs. Owen plans to go on to the United States.

U. S. Jobless Show Increase At 10,312,000

Green Asks Accounting of "Progress Made" to Cut Unemployment.

With 10,312,000 workers estimated to be idle in this country, labor yesterday asked for an accounting of the "progress made" to reduce unemployment so that the jobless may know where they stand.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, urged this in a statement calling attention to the rise in the jobless ranks due to summer layoffs, and saying that "there is no further prospect of new jobs in industry until the fall season."

Labor's total jobless estimate was based on figures submitted to the federation by unions and is backed up by statistics of the National Industrial Conference Board, revealing manufacturing activity in June, as measured by total man hours worked, decreased 2.4 per cent. The board's estimate was said to have been based on reports from 25 industries.

10,122,000 Last October.

The total number of workers now jobless, Mr. Green cited, compares with 10,122,000 in October, following the reemployment campaign of 1933.

"Although business activity during the first six months of this year averaged 7 per cent higher than last October, this was not enough to create jobs," he said.

Industrial unemployment has steadily been above the October level. Business firms have succeeded increasing activity without making any important reduction in the great standing arm yof job seekers.

"Recent surveys show that a large proportion of this standing army has been without work for two years or more."

He declared the Government was endeavoring to meet this increasing rise in the jobless ranks with additional work on PWA and FERA programs.

Government Pay Roll Grows.

From figures furnished him by the Government, he said PWA added approximately 100,000 to its June paty roll, and the number on the FERA rolls rose from 858,000 at the end of May to 983,000 on July 5. The number at conservation camps declined from 312,000 in May to 256,000 in June.

"Thus the average number at work on all three of these emergency programs rose from 1,671,000 in May to 1,813,000 in June," he observed. "The pay rolls increased from $79,143,000 in May to $86,779,000 in June. Although 10,312,000 had no work under Government emergency programs, the total number without work of any sort was 8,499,000. This compared with 8,577,000 in May."

Thomas Norton, 54, Is Killed in Fall

Retired Government Clerk Dies in New York.

Thomas Norton, 54, of 27533 Woodley place northwest, a retired Government clerk, died yesterday in New York City in a fall from an apartment window in which he was sitting, according to the Associated Press.

His wife, Mary, and friends they were visiting, Mr. and Mrs. John Burke, called aid, but Norton was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital.

Relatives of Mr. Norton could not be reached last night, but it was understood funeral arrangements had not been completed.

U. S. Contractor Denies Charge Of Wage Graft

Former Federal Official Said to Have Influenced Letting of Work.

The plans for the structure, Mr. Herfurth told the committee, were vague and needed many changes. These plans, which he said, were drawn up by Von Pagenhardt, cost him approximately $2,600 in extra work, he testified. The total price of the contract was $27,000.

The alleged "kick-back" to the Alexandria firm was testified to by Harry A. Carter, L. A. Coombs and Charles Wolfe, all of whom worked on the job as steel workers. Although the prevailing wages for the job was $1.65 an hour they received 65 cents and 50 cents, they said.

Kick-Back Demanded.

For one week only, they told the committee, they were paid the $1.65 rate but the day after pay day all were asked by Steucke to return the difference between the scale set by th Labor Department and the wages thy were usually getting. This, they did, they said.

Steucke told the committee that this did not happen. He went on to explain that Carter, who got 65 cents an hour, was being paid at the rate of $1.10 an hour for the time he worked on steel and 50 cents on hour for unskilled work.

Other testimony that the prevailing wage on the St. Elizabeths project was not paid came from Leslie Myers, busines srepresentative for the Washington branch of the ironworkers' union. He alsa said the Alexandria firm discharged James P. Hayes after he had signed an affidavit to the effect that he was not getting the prevailing wage.

Complaints Not Aadjusted.

Myers told of numerous complaints which he made to the Labor Department and to the Interior Department about the fact that the right scale was not being paid and that the work was defective. The poor steel work, he said, was corrected, but the claims of the men on the job were never met.

The request for holding up of the naval construction came from Joseph McDonough, representative of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who said that workers on the ships will not get a fair deal until an industrial relations board can be authorized to settle wage matters.

As things stand at present, he said, only a minimum wage is provided by the shipbuilding and repair code. Because of this, workers would be provided with only the protection of this minimum wage, as the contracts will specify that the code wage requirements will prevail.

Naval Work Far Behind.

Testimony about the failure of the 1933 naval program came from W. A. Colvin, vice president of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders. He said: "Only about one-third of the progress promised for the first 12 months has been performed. As a result thousands of men have been kept out of employment."

Senator Walsh's suggestion about legislation making it possible for the Comptroller General to hold up payments to contractors pending settlement of labor claims, came after several union men and Veterans' Administration officials had testified about prevailing wage disputes in connection with several hospital construction jobs.

Much Testimony to Study.

It was also brought out that no effort is made to blacklist contractors who have refused to meet the prevailing wage requirements and who have thus been responsible for labor disputes on construction projects.

No date was set for the resumption of the hearing, when it was adjourned last night. The committee has considerable quantity of testimony to examine.

print and newspaper trucks could move without permits.

Personal movements were not restricted, but parking in a 72-block area downtown was prohibited during daylight hours only.

Several reports were received that pickets were active despite military orders forbidding such enterprises. Though guards investigated complaints of the stopping of trucks and one looting of a vehicle, no arrests were made.

Communist Editors Taken From Court

Minneapolis, Minn., July 27 (U.P.). Two Communist editors were in the guardhouse tonight as National Guardsmen held complete control of Minneapolis and hope dwindled for early settlement of the riotious strike of union truck drivers.

The editors, James P. Cannon, of the Militant, and Max Shactman, of the International, were arrested in military fashion on suspicion of distributing Communistic literature in connection with the strike. Both are from New York.

A modified press censorship was established under the military dictatorship which Gov. Floyd B. Olson declared yesterday.

The editors were in Judge Paul W. Guilford's court when soldiers appeared. They had been arrested previously by civil authorities. Guilford was signing a writ of habeas corpus for their release when a sergeant, carrying a submachine gun, entered.

"Wait a minute," the sergeant said.

He departed, but returned with a corporal. The two escorted the editors outside the courtroom. A squad of soldiers formed a square. The editors were ordered inside it. The group marched away to the guardhouse.

Adjt. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh, who rules under Gov. Olson's edict, said that arrest of the editors and establishment of the modified press censorship did not mean that any effort would be made to "gag" the press.

Longshore Parley Proves Ineffective

San Francisco, July 27 (AP).—A meeting of President Roosevelt's mediation board and shipping representatives, presumably to make final arrangements for the return to work of striking longshoremen and marine workers in Pacific Coast ports, ended apparently without definite results today.

It was understood the conferees had come to no conclusion about what should be done with nonunion maritime workers upon the return of union men to the jobs. There were indications also that the question of further use of the old employer-controlled hiring halls for seamen had not been adjusted.

There were indications that the board and the employers had agreed upon arrangements for the return of longshoremen to work, but exact information was not available.

Union men were reported to have raised the question of what would happen if union longshoremen, back on their jobs, encountered nonunion seamen on ships to be worked.

O. K. Cushing, a member of the President's board, said a report from the employers was expected later in the day.

Ballots for the seafaring men had been prepared, the board said, and were ready to be sent out.

V. F. W. Will Mark Bonus Battle Today

Graves of Two Slain in '32 to Be Decorated.

Memorial exercises marking the second anniversary of the "Battle of Pennsylvania Avenue," when the bonus marchers were evicted from their camping grounds by police and the Army two years ago, will be held by the Veterans of Foreign Wars and representatives of other veterans' organizations in the District at Arlington National Cemetery at 6 p. m. today.

The veterans will place wreaths on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and then decorate the graves of the two men slain in rioting on Pennsylvania avenue.

Practically every veterans' group in Washington has been invited to participate. The Rev. Stanislaus Czyz will be the principal speaker.

Five Library Branches Will Reopen August 1

The five sub-branches of the Public Library will reopen August 1, Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian, announced yesterday.

Since July 15 the sub-branch libraries at Chevy Chase, Conduit road, Eastern High School, Tenley and Woodridge have been closed as an economy measure. All books borrowed for use during the two weeks of closing are returnable at any time after the sub-branches reopen, but fines will not be charged until August 13.

Boy Sues for $10,000; Says Truck Hit Him

Edward C. Kluge, a minor, through his father, Edward C. Kluge, of Woodridge, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to award him $10,000 damages from John Meiklejohn, of Van Buren street and Sandy Spring road northwest, because of injuries sustained when hit by a truck February 10.

The boy alleged he was near his home when a truck owned by Meiklejohn struck him. Attorney H. L. McCormick represented the plaintiff.

Sigray Holds Hapsburg Rule Vital to Austria

Budapest, Hungary, July 27 (AP) Count Sigray, leader of the Hungarian Legitimates, in a statement on the Austrian situation today said that the restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy is absolutely necessary for Hungary and Austria.

"Hungary is now more isolated than ever, and the outlook for the future is hopeless," Count Sigray said.

Social and Political Upheavels Likely; Envoy Says.

America's roving ambassador, Norman H. Davis, returned to Washington yesterday and reported that Europe stands in far more danger of social and political upheavals—such as the Austrian putsch—than it does of any general war.

The undaunted champion of disarmament declared the elements that generally make for war are lacking, the people don't want war, nor is there any great animosity between Nations. In fact, he added, Europeans are much more apt to punish their leaders than to march off against their neighbors.

As a general rule, he said, the Nations most prepared for war are anxious for peace, while the more apt to punish their leaders than to march off against their neighbors.

As a general rule, he said, the Nations most prepared for war are anxious for peace, while the more belligerent countries lack the means with which to make war. He further believes that America is more concerned about a war in Europe than Europe is herself.

Before thus disposing of "war talk" of the last few days, the Ambassador reported to Secretary of State Cordell Lull and Admiral W. H. Standley, chief of Naval operations, on the preliminary conversations in London on next year's Naval conference.

London appears the most likely city for the conference, he indicated, but no decisions either as to place or time have yet been fixed. The conversations were purely exploratory, he said, called to clear the air of preliminary issues before the actual meeting.

After the Japanese naval delegation confers with the British in October, the ambassador is prepared to return for bi-lateral conversations. So far, he said, there has been no discussion of political questions—a point that has agitated the Japanese foreign office.

Kansas Police Baffled by Burned Body

Remains of Woman, With Hatpin Through Head, Provide Mystery.

Winfield, Kans., July 27 (AP).—The discovery of the badly burned body of an unidentified woman about 35, with a 5-inch hatpin penetrating the head, provided authorities with a mystery today.

The body was found in a field about 2 miles southwest of Hackney, Kans., by a railroad section crew that went to investigate the nearby burned field.

Sheriff M. C. Anders, of Cowley County, said the woman apparently had been dead for several hours. One leg had been virtually burned off the body. A can nearby contained a small amount of water, believed to be from the rain that fell last night.

Coroner A. E. Morris said he had not determined whether the woman died of the hatpin stabbing or was burned to death. There was no pile of ashes to indicate a long-burning fire.

There were no indications of a struggle near where the body lay, Morris said, and there were no automobile tracks or other marks to support a theory the woman might have been slain elsewhere and her body taken to the field to be destroyed by fire to divert suspicion.

An inquest was called for tomorrow afternoon.

Parts of a diary found nearby indicated the woman had been in Kansas City and Augusta, Kans., recently. One entry said "arrived Winfield 8 a. m., July 26."

The workmen who discovered the body said they saw a woman, who appeared distressed, leave a bus alone last night near the place the body was found. After she got off the bus, they said, she apparently tried to escape attention, and darted behind hedgerows. Because of the distance, they obtained no description of her.

Victims of Texas Storm Ask Aid

Death List Stands at 8 With 4 Missing.

Houston, Tex., July 27 (AP).—Rehabilitation was started today in the Texas coastal area ravaged Wednesday by a hurricane and residents asked for outside aid from both private and public agencies.

The list of known dead stood at eight. Four other persons were missing and friends feared they had drowned.

The hurricane evidently lashed hardest at the coast line between Galveston and Palacios, but crop damage was suffered as far south as Corpus Christi. Destruction of crops, livestock losses, bridge washouts, damage to homes and the like boosted the storm's property toll into the millions.

Robles Kidnaping Arrests Expected

Tucson and Los Angeles Suspects Watched.

Tuscon, Ariz., July 27 (AP).—It was reported unofficially today that Federal and local investigators are hopeful soon of solving the kidnaping of 6-year-old June Robles shortly. Arrests here and in Los Angeles are expected.

Federal agents are investigating clews in Los Angeles, it was said, where the arrest of one of three suspects was looked for. The man suspected of having engineered the kidnaping, it was reported, is in the Coast city.

Other suspects, it was said, are still in Tuscon, including a man suspected of having been the one who actually kidnaped June.

Hefty Chorines Are Wanted in Local Musical

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Wanted, girls weighing 180 pounds or over, for a special number in the "All-Washington Revue," scheduled to be presented in Loew's Fox Theater the week beginning Friday, August 10.

This is the call sent out by Gene Ford, Loew production manager, down from New York to produce the revue. It is a matter, we are led to believe, that is occasioning Mr. Ford some concern. So, those who may be interested are requested to present themselves at the stage door of the Fox this afternoon between the hours of 3 and 5.

Another type of dancer Mr. Ford is anxious to round up is the "Lindyhopper." We are told that this type of dance is the rage at present all over the country. If it is, we have not as yet indentified it by name.

"Lindy-Hoppers," Too.

However, if there are any "Lindyhoppers" lurking in the National Capital with their lights hidden under a lot of bushels, they, too, are urged to present themselves at the stage door this afternoon between the hours named.

From the additional auditions held in the auditorium of the National Press Club yesterday morning and afternoon, Mr. Ford and his associate talent judges were able to make several selections for possible places in the all-Washington show. Altogether, Mr. Ford and his assistants have auditioned somewhere in the neighborhood of 250 aspirants to cast and chorus of the revue.

Rehearsals Begin Tomorrow.

Rehearsals for the line-girls and some of the specialists will begin tomorrow morning at the studios of Joe Brown at 1210 G street. Gene Ford will be present when the rehearsals start at 10 o'clock.

As yet, no selection has been made of a master of ceremonies—the post so ebulliently occupied by Brooke Johns last year—although Mr. Ford and Division Manager Carter Barron are said to have several clever major domos under consideration.

Reverting briefly to that 10:15-to-final curtain broadcast of "Murder in the Red Barn," as presented by the Roadside Theater Players out at their "barn" theater in Halpine, Md., 6 miles the other side of Bethesda—principal details of which were first set forth in this space yesterday morning—it may be said that the boardcast through Station WMAL tonight now is assured.

Necessary poles to carry the additional wiring were set yesterday. For the benefit of those in the audience, loudspeakers will be so placed as to enable them to hear the entr'acte announcements. There will also be receiving sets in the green room, for the edification of the actors.

At the conclusion of the play, the members of the cast will be introduced over the air by Announcer McGrath. The broadcast will immediately follow the Postilion, this journal's announcement of important news events, which will be on the air tonight from 10 to 10:15. So now you know.

Downey Here Tonight.

Regardless of weather conditions, Managers Eddie Carr and Al Stern, of Chevy Chase Lake, announce that one of the most sensational evenings of entertainment seen in these parts this year will be presented exactly according to schedule.

This would be the Morton Downey-Joe Haymes Orchestra combination, which the Messrs. Carr and Stern report from an early-week Baltimore preview is one of the best ever brought to town. Their engagement is for tonight only. Festivities will proceed without interruption from 9 p. m., to 1 a. m.

Instead of appearing merely in a brief cycle of songs, Morton Downey, famous tenor of stage, screen and radio, will be in the thick of things all the evening presiding, as has been remarked here before, at one of the pianos in the Joe Haymes band.

Specialists in Band.

The band, incidentally, supplements the Downey solo contributions with a continuous outpouring of comedy, drama and specialties from among its own membership. The combination, it may be repeated, is said to be one that clicks from first minutes to last of the four-hour session.

It is expected that a huge crowd will be on hand to take advantage of this unusual al fresco entertainment opportunity. In case of rain, the program will be moved under cover up the road a short distance in the Kensington Armory, with a capacity of 1,500.

"Cimarron," RKO-Radio's picturization of Edna Ferber's historical novel dealing with the heroic pioneering of the State of Oklahoma, in which Richard Dix and Irene Dunne, supported by Edna May Oliver, Estelle Taylor, George E. Stone and a large company of others, achieved signal triumphs in the year 1931, is being revived at RKO-Keith's next Wednesday, August 1. It will follow "Whom the Gods Destroy," the current feature, starring Walter Connolly, with Doris Kenyon, Robert Young and Hobart Bosworth. It will be interesting to obeserve whether the mechanical developments of the last three years and a half have been such as to stamp this admirable subject with any of the handicaps of a visible antiquity. Probably not.

The Connolly-Jannings Matter.

Speaking of Walter Connolly and "Whom the Gods Destroy," there are those who apparently resent the suggestion that there could be any possible analogy between the recent activities of Mr. Connolly and the more remote professional activities in this country of Emil Jannings.

It seems to me impossible not to detect a close and inescapable analogy between the Connolly role in "Whom the Gods Destroy" and the parts played by Herr Jannings, for example, in "The Way of All Flesh" and "The Sins of the Father." They are cut from the same materials and in the same pattern. This is not to say, however, that Mr. Connolly and Herr Jannings must now and forever be held as identical in the public mind.

As a matter of fact, I discern extremely few resemblances between them, beyond the outstanding fact that both are splendid actors. This, again, does not alter the contention that the current picture at RKO-Keith's is precisely the sort of thing Jannings was doing in this country a decade or more ago and probably would be doing now were it not for the major matter of accent.

Washington will have another opportunity to revel in the prodigious pedal pastiming of probably the greatest natural dancer on the American stage when Hal Le Roy opens his week's engagement at the Earle today. Unlike most "hoofers," Hal does not routine his dances. On the contrary, he just gets out there with the greatest equipment of coordination and rhythm with which any young man ever was endowed and lets nature take its course. And what a course nature takes! Triple-time seems to be the simplest form of tap-dancing Mr. Le Roy ever undertakes. Even the snare-drummer has a tough order trying to keep up with him.

A Mouse in the Library!

Recognizing the influence of the animated cartoon in the talking picture field, and Mickey's international reputation, the editors of the Encyclopedia Britannica plan to issue in their September bulletin an article entitled, "The Story of the Animated Cartoon; from the Phenakistoscope to Mickey Mouse." The article will be illustrated with sketches and photographs from the Walt Disney studios.

When a new edition of the Britannica is issued, Mickey Mouse will be awarded a prominent place between its covers. The editors of the Encyclopedia Britannica, however, cognizant of the position Mickey Mouse holds before the public of the world, have decided not to make their subscribers and clients wait until the new edition is issued, but to include this interesting story in their bulletin, released to supplement the Britannicas now in use.

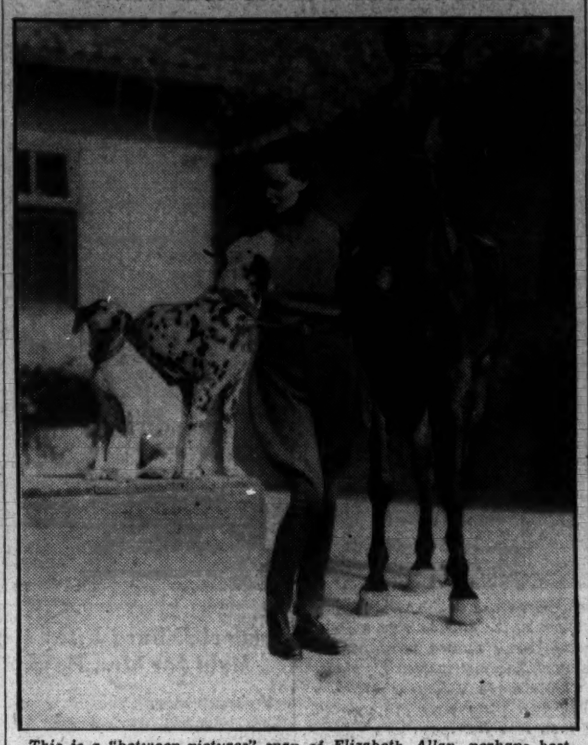
The writing of this article was assigned to Earl Theisen, honorary curator of motion pictures at the Los Angeles Museum.

Flattery Note.

If this sort of thing keeps up, it won't be long until it will be looked upon as a compliment to be classed among the rodents.

So, so long, you rat!

British Actress Is Fond of Pets



This is a "between-pictures" snap of Elizabeth Allan, perhaps best remembered for her splendid work opposite Clark Gable in "Men in White," who, in addition to being an excellent actress, also is an ardent horsewoman. She is shown here with her favorite horse, Sandy, which she rides daily over the mountain trails back of Beverly Hills, Calif., and her two pet Dalmatians.

Straight From the Studios

Franchot Tone, Away From M-G-M, Leaps Into Great Demand; Many Candidates Are in Field for "Adverse" Role; Other Newsy Items.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, July 26.—Franchot Tone is in great demand, of a sudden. He is even being mentioned for the lead in "The Little Minister," opposite Katherine Hepburn — and what an interesting combining that would be! How Tone will fulfil his various commitments is a question, since he is immediately to appear in the lead opposite Josephine Hutchinson in "Oil for the Lamps of China" when he finishes "Just Out of College."

DOLORES DEL RIO.

With Tone away from M.-G.-M., it looks as if Joan Crawford might be having George Brent as her lead in "Salute, There Goes Romance." He has been borrowed for "The Painted Veil" from Warner Brothers. That is what might be termed a fair exchange all around.

• • • •

Prospective Nominations.

Ronald Coleman has been added to the list of nominees for the role of Anthony Adverse, according to opinions expressed by the fans in connection with the contest being held to decide, if possible, the lead for this big costume production. Previously hailed for the role were Leslie Howard and Fredric March.

And who do you suppose the fans are favoring for Napoleon? Paul Muni, as well as Richard Barthelmess, who recently completed his contract at Warners. The role of Dolores is estimated to be just right for Dolores del Rio. Maybe the name similarity had something to do with it.

• • • •

Another Costume Film.

Question of a modernization of "What Every Woman Knows" is much debated. It might be kept in the period during which the events were originally supposed to transpire, namely about 40 years ago. That would mean a costume film, of which there will probably be many during this forthcoming season.

Lucille Watson, the character actress who appeared in "No More Ladies," has been cast as the Countess in the feature by Irving Thalberg. Helen Hayes and Brian Aherne are the leads.

• • • •

Interesting Casting.

Another bit of interesting casting brings William Tannen, son of Julius Tannen, to the screen. He will play in "Biography of a Bachelor," with Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery. Tannen has had two seasons in the theater with Katharine Cornell, and was in "The School for Scandal" with Ethel Barrymore. He also was in the "Garrick Gaieties" (last edition) for the New York Theater Guild.

• • • •

May Be A New Star.

Maybe Edward Arnold will have his chance at stardom, too. He is regarded as one of the character finds of the year. A story is being worked on now under the supervision of B. P. Schulberg, called "St. Nick," which is said to have an excellent part for Arnold. It was written by Marguerite Roberts, who just finished "The End of the World," Paramount possession, though that has been shelved temporarily.

• • • •

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Ruby Keeler will arrive here the first of the week for work in "Flirtation Walk."

"Madame Du Barry," with Dolores del Rio, has had a successful opening in London.

Lou Brock is dispatching a crew to Shanghai to get background shots for his picture, "Ho, for Shanghai."

Hobart Cavanaugh is to continue working for Warner Brothers; he has had his option taken up.

"The Case of the Curious Bride," with Warren Williams and Helen Trenholme, will be directed by Alan Crosland.

Big Audience Greets Sylvan Fete Artists

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

Attendance at last night's operatic concert at the Sylvan Theater gave additional testimony to the popularity of the summer festival entertainments arranged by the Community Center Department. An audience almost as large as that of the previous week assembled at the Monument base to enjoy a diversified program.

The United States Marine Band, which supplied accompaniments for the vocalists and dancers, opened the concert with selections from Giordano's opera of the French Revolution, "Andrea Chenier." Capt. Taylor Branson chose for the other instrumental numbers the colorful march from Goldmark's "The Queen of Sheba," and two Wagnerian excerpts: the "Walkurenritt" and the overture to "Tannhaeuser."

Robert Frederick Freund gave a robust reading of "O du mein holder Abendstern" as the first soloist of the evening, and joined later with Kroom Bagranoff in the duet, "Solenne in quest'ora" from Verdi's "La Forza del Destino." Mr. Bagranoff's solo offering was the prize song from "Die Meistersinger."

Marie Head Marques contributed the contralto solo, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from "Samson et Dalila," and Franceska Kaspar Lawson, soprano, was heard in the taxing "One Fine Day," from "Madame Butterfly." Wilfrid Smith gave resonant voice to the familiar "Celeste Aida" aria. The soloists were heartily received, and each responded with an extra number.

One of the most applauded offerings of the evening was the quartet from "Rigoletto," sung by Helen Howison, Richie McLean, Wilfrid Smith and J. E. S. Kinsella. The audience clamored for another selection, but the singers had evidently not prepared for an encore.

Lisa Gardiner, assisted by Alice Louise Hunter, Mary Day, Christine Stewart, Ela Vomachla and Betty Yoder, presented the "Fire Dance" from Manuel de Falla's ballet, "El Amor Brujo," in picturesque fashion. Miss Gardiner's group were also seen in the "Dance of the Hours" from "La Gioconda," with Kathleen Piazza as premiere danseuse.

DISMISSED workers from NRA, Census Bureau and other agencies whose temporary appointments are expiring on completion of certain emergency projects in those agencies are being given preference in employment at the new Federal Housing Administration.

BAKER

While literally thousands of job-seekers continue to jam the sixth-floor corridors at FHA offices in the new Postoffice Building, the FHA personnel office is awaiting lists of qualified persons from the retrenching agencies and Civil Service lists.

Job-seekers are urged to obtain the regular Government application form, No. 6, with mimeographed additions, and mail those applications to the FHA. This procedure, it was pointed out, will eliminate the unnecessary confusion at the Postoffice Building, which is causing discomfort to the throngs of unemployed, and will facilitate the organization of FHA.

The Civil Service Reinstatement League will meet Tuesday night at the Thomson School, Twelfth and L streets northwest. The league will meet again on August 7 and 21.

Miss L. M. Williamson, of Michigan, and Miss Adelaide Marion, of New York, were the guests recently of Miss Mathilda Hartman (*), Agriculture. They stopped en route from the Pacific Coast to New York. Later Miss Williamson and Miss Marion were guests at a tea given by F. Miller, of Cabin John, Md.

Several beautiful pieces of silverware were presented to Miss Isabel M. Middleton, Records Division, Internal Revenue, and Stanley T. Houchen, Audit Review Division, Internal Revenue, by their co-workers. Miss Middleton and Mr. Houchen were married early this month and have just returned from an extended honeymoon.

Employes Plan Outing.

Elaborate plans are complete for the second annual picnic tomorrow afternoon of the Division of Highway Transport, Bureau of Public Roads, in Rock Creek, Dan O'Flaherty (*), chairman of arrangements, announces.

The outing, which will be from 2 to 10 p. m., will include stunt races, a baseball game, a "tonsorial contest," and miscellaneous events with an abundance of refreshments on hand during the entire period. The celebration will center about Playground No. 22, at Beach and Sherrill drives.

A picnic lunch will be served at 2 p. m. All employes and their guests will be transported from the office to the picnic under direction of the transportation committee, consisting of W. Carl Wyatt, chairman; C. B. Bishop, Robert A. Montgomery and C. H. Quimby, jr. Heads of other committees include:

Mrs. Gladys Eldridge, refreshments; E. H. Holmes, entertainment; Miss Glauvina Musselman, children's games, and Miss Anna Mae Martin, prizes.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Nigel Bruce and Heather Angel in "Murder in Trinidad"); or to Loew's Palace (second week of Ronald Colman in "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back"); or to Loew's Fox (stage, Phil Harris Orchestra and other acts; screen, Shirley Temple in "Baby, Take a Bow").

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturdays, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Colored Employes Organize.

The first meeting of the first branch of the colored employes union of the NFFE, Local No. 71, yesterday reported NFFE membership among the press wipers of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing doubled since the branch of No. 71 was organized there. At the meeting a constitution was formulated and the appointment of committees begun by the new officers. The committeemen will be made known at the next meeting, Thursday, August 9, at 2 p. m., at Local NFFE headquarters, 710 Fourteenth street northwest.

Local No. 71 will induct its second branch Monday, July 30. This will be designated Agriculture Department No. 3. The new and prospective members of the branch will assemble at the new Agriculture auditorium at 4:45 that afternoon.

Luther C. Steward and Miss Gertrude M. McNally, National president and secretary-treasurer of the NFFE, will attend, as will A. C. Edwards, president of the Agriculture branch of Local No. 2. They will speak and induct the officers to be named at that time.

The colored Federal employes local has membership in all the departments and agencies in Washington. It now seeks to form branch units in the organizations wherein a large number of colored workers are employed. The Government Printing Office, the Treasury Department, the Navy Yard, and the Veterans' Administration are other offices where branches are to be projected.

George Carter Honored.

As a token of affection for their retired chief, George H. Carter, former Public Printer, employes in every section of Government Printing Office raised $1,000 for the purchase of a gift automobile. The check was presented to Mr. Carter at his home Wednesday night amid a little informal ceremony. The following members of the presentation committee represented the employes:

Harry Leek, M. R. Speelman, Miss Ethel Daly, John Greene, Floyd W. Palmer, Clyde M. Mills, Sidney R. Vaughn, T. G. Brown, R. H. Simmons, Miss Helen C. Silliman (*), E. A. Huse, Manuel K. Kline, John F. Hysan, Peter W. Pritchett, Joseph Duffy, R. C. Smith W. J. Cook, Dr. D. P. Bush and Miss Abbie B. Loeffler.

Park Murder Case Suspect Released

Gives Facts Which May Aid in Locating Another.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—C. T. Powell, arrested Wednesday in the Battlefield Park murder case, was released today after two days of questioning by Department of Justice agents.

Information received from Powell was expected to throw light on the whereabouts and record of Paul Woodall, believed to be "the man from North Carolina" mentioned by Milton Brown in connection with the attack on him and the murder of his 21-year-old fiancee, Miss Fannie Kurz, May 20. Woodall is being sought, Department of Justice men said last night.

Woodall, an itinerant knife sharpener, is thought to have roomed with Powell here before the murder of Miss Kurz and to have driven a car bearing North Carolina license plates.

New Roanoke Work Aid Plan in Effect

Roanoke, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Roanoke's new relief plan which will spread work over a large number who will receive a lower weekly compensation rate, went into effect today.

At least one member of the 1,478 families on the work relief rolls of the Social Service Bureau will obtain work under the new plan. Previously only about one-third of the total number of families have been working in any one week.

Workers will be given eight hours a week, earning $2.80 at a laborer's wage of 35 cents an hour and for each additional member of the family 70 cents per week is allowed. The plan required the appropriation of an additional $4,500 for July to supplement the Federal allotment for that month. It is estimated that around $10,000 per month will be needed in addition to the $20,000 which it is presumed the Federal Emergency Relief Administration will supply the city.

Mrs. Cornelia Seibert Buried in Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Cornelia Seibert, 63, wife of Joseph L. Seibert, were held this afternoon with burial in Old Norborne Cemetery.

Mrs. Seibert was born in Harpers Ferry. Surviving are her husband, one brother, the Rev. H. L. Riley, of Greenville, S. C., and a sister, Mrs. M. J. Van Metre, Columbia, S. C.

Emmert N. Fiery's Funeral Set Today

Traveling Representative Dies in Harrisonburg.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.). Funeral services will be held here tomorrow afternoon for Emmert N. Fiery, 56, native of this city, widely known traveling representative, who died in a Harrisonburg, Va., hospital this morning after an extended illness.

He for some years represented a local hosiery manufacturing establishment in the Middle West and South, later was associated with a daily newspaper here, and lately had been representing a firm of electric manufacturing appliances. He had headquarters at different times here, at Hagerstown, Md.; Wheeling, W. Va., and Harrisonburg.

Surviving are two sons, William F., this city, and J. M., Washington, and two sisters, Mrs. W. M. Johnson, Jefferson City, Mo., and Mrs. W. H. Hoge, St. Louis, Mo.

Church to Conduct School at Lucketts

Lucketts, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—A vacation church school sponsored by Faith Chapel Presbyterian Church will be held at the Lucketts School, opening Monday and continuing for two weeks.

Children from 4 to 16 years of age are invited to attend and will be transported with busses. The bus will go to Furnace Mountain, Lost Corner and to White's Gate.

The Rev. G. M. Morrow will head the school. Workers in the four departments will be Miss Florence Titus, Mrs. Melvin Fry, Mrs. Nelson Titus and Miss Thelma Fry, assisted by Misses Ruth Arnold, Mildred McKimmey, Anna McKimmey and Frances McKimmey. Mrs. Mildred Faulkner will have charge of the music.

Rural Letter Carriers Meet at Martinsville

Martinsville, Va., July 27 (Spl.). The annual report of B. L. Jenkins, Richmond, State president, featured the opening of the thirty-first annual meeting of the Virginia Rural Letter Carriers Association here today.

About 150 delegates are here, including members of the ladies auxjliary, which is also holding its meeting. Committee reports and the election of officers will take place tomorrow.

Alleged Still Owner Is Held

Suspect Is Held Under $1,500 Bond in Cumberland.

Cumberland, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—Charles J. Keeth was held under $1,500 bond yesterday afternoon when arraigned before United States Commissioner Taylor Morrison, charged with ownership of an unlicensed still and possession of liquor on which tax was unpaid. He was arrested after the seizure of a 100-gallon still Tuesday afternoon.

Twenty barrels of mash and 30 gallons of illicit liquor were destroyed.

George E. Fazenbaker, of McCoole, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Sergt. John Kries, of the State police, charged with sale of liquor without a county license. He was released under $1,000 bond.

Bondy Addresses Disaster Parley

Bristol, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Robert C. Bondy, of Washington, National director of Red Cross disaster relief, was the principal speaker at yesterday morning's session of the Southwest Virginia Red Cross Disaster Relief Conference at the General Shelby Hotel.

Red Cross representatives from 14 southwest Virginia counties and one in east Tennessee heard Mr. Bondy's discussion of "The National Position of the American Red Cross in Disaster Relief; Relations With Local, State and Federal Agencies." Mr. Bondy also led the general discussion.

The conference was called to order by Robert C. Boswell, chairman of the Bristol host chapter. Invocation was offered by the Rev. E. L. Crump, of Lee County, and the delegates were welcomed by Charles J. Harkrader, member of the Bristol (Va.) council.

Winchester Man Honored.

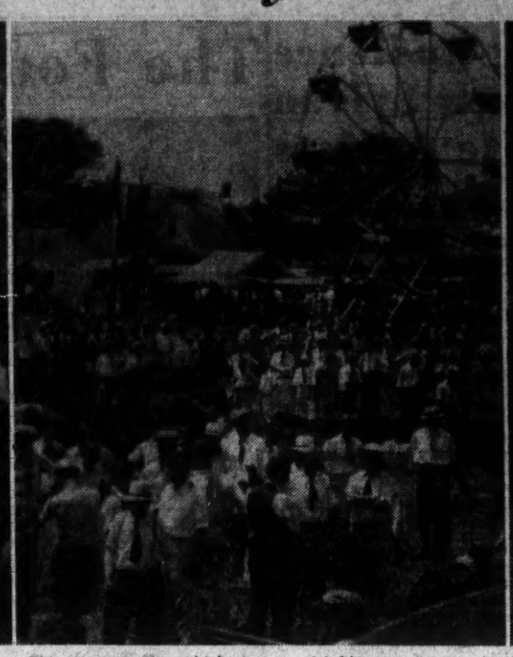
Thousands See Tough Eastern Cowboys Tame Wild Ponies at Chincoteague



Thursday was pony round-up day at Chincoteague, Va., which, incidentally, according to reports, has not had a depression. After riding over to Assateague Island in motor boats to begin the day's work or sport, the wild ponies were driven to the edge of the island and made to swim a narrow inlet over to Chincoteague Island, there to join more ponies, driven into Chincoteague, where the bronco-busting, corralling and sales took place. Left—Frank Magee, Philadelphia, may be seen in the background on one of the wild ponies; he won $10 for being the only bronco-buster able to ride a pony without being thrown; the white-and-brown spotted pony with a rope around its neck, in the foreground, has just thrown his rider. Center—The grounds where the Chincoteague Volunteer Firemen are holding their ten-day carnival; two pony pens are nearby. Right—Ponies being driven into the town.

NRA Praised In Lynchburg Keynote Talk

By C. B. Carr.

Lynchburg, Va., July 27.—The New Deal of the Roosevelt Administration was defended here today in its entirety by John J. Wicker, jr., Virginia manager of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, in the keynote address of the third annual convention of the Young Democrats Clubs of Virginia.

More than 1,000 members of the Young Democrats Clubs of the Old Dominion were in the city armory, scene of the convention, as John Galleher, of Leesburg, president of the State organization, officially opened the convention and presented Mr. Wicker as the keynoter.

"From the moment of President Roosevelt's Administration, the entire Nation changed and we have surely and steadily been marching forward on the road to recovery," Wicker told his hearers.

Mr. Wicker praised the National Recovery Administration as a great National mobilization of industry designed to place all business on a livable basis of fair competition, fair prices and fair wages.

Praises Many Agencies.

He included in his defense of the Roosevelt Administration praise and support of the Civil Works Administration, Public Works Administration, Federal Emergency Relief Administration, Civilian Conservation Corps camps, Home Owners Loan Corporation, Agriculture adjustment act, Tennessee Valley Authority, control of the stock markets and regulation of the banking systems as great strides toward the eventual recovery of the United States from economic depression.

Mr. Wicker flayed the critics of the "New Deal" as "Only too glad to be rescued from disaster which threatened us all."

Answering recent criticism of Virginia Senators Carter Glass and Harry Flood Byrd in some quarters for their opposition of some "New Deal" principles, he declared that all Virginia Senators and Representatives are united in general policy and purpose and that some differences of opinion are good for the general welfare.

Crop Insurance Urged.

Mr. Wicker proposed that a system of crop insurance be organized by the Federal Government. He declared that the great risk which agriculture took with droughts, storms, &c., made it mandatory that the Government show that industry favors which were not accorded other industries because they did not face similar risks. Although private insurance companies would be unable to organize such protection, Mr. Wicker felt that it would be an easy matter for the Federal Government.

The classing of Senator Glass as a "superstatesman," praise of Senator Byrd for his "pay as you go" road plan in Virginia and the declaration that "the Lord God" sent Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Presidency brought loud and prolonged applause from the convention floor.

At the opening of the convention the Rev. Richard H. Lee, rector of Grace Memorial Episcopal Church, Lynchburg, pronounced the invocation. Mayor John Victor, of Lynchburg, welcomed the delegates to the convention.

Galleher Speaks.

In his annual address, John Galleher, Leesburg, president, urged the youthful members of the Democratic party to show increased interest in the work of the party. He concluded by stating that he would not stand for reelection. However, it was learned in authoritative quarters that he will probably be put forward again as a candidate.

The convention was permanently organized following the keynote address. Fred B. Grear, of Wise, was elected permanent chairman, being escorted to the rostrum by a committee composed of James C. Mackall, of Fairfax; Harold Strain, of Richmond, and Francis B. Waters, of Accomac. Other officers of the permanent organization included Joseph V. Gorman, Lynchburg, secretary; Mrs. Peyton Cish, assistant secretary; Maitland H. Bustard, of Danville, parliamentarian; R. T. Smith, chief tally clerk; Miss Genevieve Baumeck, of Richmond; Miss Edith Thorpe, of Lynchburg; St. Clair Phillips, of Newport News; Harry F. Byrd, jr., of Berryville, and Miss Maude O'Leary, of Prospect, assistant tally clerks; William Birdsong, of Suffolk, sergeant at arms; Walter Murphy, Lynchburg; Clifton Saffer, Gordonsville; Scarborough and John Curry, assistant sergeants at arms.

The credentials committee announced that there would be 969 votes in the present convention, apportioned as follows: Alexandria, 24; Amherst, 2; Alta Vista, 2; Appomattox, 4; Arlington, 6; Augusta, 15; Campbell, 3; Carolina, 4; Chesterfield, 2; Charlottesville and Albemarle, 6; Clarendon, 3; Clarke, 2; Culpeper, 4; Farmville, 4; Fairfax, 15; Falls Church, 7; Giles, 4; Goochland, 2; Halifax, 4; Hanover, 4; Henrico, 9; Henrico-town, 7; Lynchburg, 50; Montgomery, 3; Nelson, 2; Newport News, 6; Nottoway, 3; Petersburg, 3; Pittsylvania, 7; Richmond City, 29; Roanoke, 4; Rockridge, 2; Smythe, 1; Southampton, 4; Tazewell, 6; Washington, 5.

District Caucuses.

Following the general convention, district caucuses were held to elect officers of the district and members of State committees. The results in the Seventh and Eighth Districts were:

Seventh District—John D. Neff, Staunton, chairman; Edward McC. Williams, Berryville, vice chairman; R. H. Wright, jr., Strasburg, secretary; John W. Wheeler, Nelson County, finance committee; W. Terrell Sheehan, of Staunton, resolutions committee; Robert Harnsberger, Luray, club activities committee; John D. Neff, Staunton, nominations committee; Assemblyman E. Blackburn Moore, Berryville, State legislation committee, and L. H. Shrader, Amherst County, constitution and by-laws committee. Lester D. Arnold, of Winchester was advanced as a candidate for State vice president.

Eighth District—James B. Duncan, Alexandria, chairman; Jesse Wilson, Charlottesville, vice chairman; Miss Katherine Jennings, Culpeper, secretary; French Slaughter, Culpeper, finance committee; Charles R. Fenwick, Falls Church, constitution and by-laws committee; Mrs. John Gallcher, Leesburg, State and legislative affairs; Lyman Kelley, Arlington, club activities committee; Charles Smith, Charlottesville, resolutions committee, and John Mackall, Fairfax, nominations committee.

A banquet was held this evening at which State officials were guests. The convention will hold its final session tomorrow afternoon, the feature of which will be an address by Senator Carter Glass. New officers of the organization will be selected.

Democratic Fight Seen in Shenandoah

Woodstock, Va., July 27 (Spl.). With the coming reorganization convention of Shenandoah Democrats here August 8, following the recent death of J. M. Bauserman, party whip, political observers in the county see the beginning of a bitter fight to gain control of the organization in Shenandoah.

It is pointed out that with the loss of the party's wheel horse in the death of Mr. Bauserman, Shenandoah Democrats, usually divided into several factions, will be further split in a county normally Republican, and will be hard put to develop a leader.

Chief candidate for leadership is Frank S. Tavenner, assistant United States district attorney for the Western District of Virginia, and the county's favorite son for the Seventh District, Congressional nomination two years ago. Commonwealth's Attorney Philip Williams and M. L. Walton, recently appointed trial justice, also are strong candidates for political leadership.

Observers point out that unless differences are amicably settled prior to the convention date, August 8, and unless the wheels of the machine are well oiled, a fight may develop on the floor of the convention which will wreck the party's chances of holding county offices in 1935, and will seriously affect the county's vote for Representative A. Willis Robertson this fall.

On the other hand, with this year also being reorganization year for Shenandoah Republicans, and with long-standing factional differences at New Market and Edinburg remaining unsettled, it is believed in other circles that the Republicans will not make serious inroads on the Democrats' strength in the county.

Richmond, July 27 (Spl.).—Representative A. J. Montague today was officially declared the Democratic nominee from the Third Congressional District for reelection this fall.

Lewis C. Williams, chairman of the Democratic committee of the district, today certified that Representative Montague has qualified for reelection.

Christian Endeavor Installs Officers

Charles Crabill Heads Shenandoah Group.

Strasburg, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Officers of the Shenandoah County Christian Endeavor Union will be installed at Crystal Caverns here Sunday. Miss Cathleen Shiplett, of Staunton, president of the Western District Union, will be in charge.

The theme of the meeting will be "Marching Forward." Young people from Strasburg and Woodstock will render special music.

Officers to be installed include Charles Crabill, Strasburg, president; Mrs. Canter Sine, Woodstock, and Miss Elizabeth Miller, Oranda, vice presidents; James Clower, Woodstock, recording secretary; Marshall Pifer, Strasburg, treasurer; Miss Azalia Carrier, Strasburg, corresponding secretary; Miss Catherine Bauserman, Woodstock, evangelism superintendent; Arthur Wake, jr., Strasburg, prayer meeting superintendent; Miss Elaine Hupp, Woodstock, Young People's superintendent; Miss Margaret Grabill, Woodstock, quiet hour superintendent; Miss Sibyl Hottle, Woodstock, social superintendent, and the Rev. J. B. Frantz, Woodstock, pastor counselor.

Virginia G.O.P. Decides Today On Campaign

Whether to Oppose Byrd One of Main Issues Before Leaders.

Roanoke, Va., July 27 (AP).—Virginia Republicans, members of the State executive committee and the State committee, were gathering here tonight for their first formal sessions since the last campaign.

One preeminently important question faced them as they began preparations for meeting in Patrick Henry Hotel tomorrow.

Condensed to a few words, it is "shall we oppose Senator Harry Flood Byrd this year?"

If the question is answered in the affirmative at the two meetings, then a time and place for a nominating convention will be selected and the party, which has been practically inactive recently, will begin rounding together its forces for a vigorous campaign in Virginia this fall.

One Candidate Named.

So far the Republican cohorts in this Democratic stronghold have named but one candidate. He is Fred Parks, of Abingdon, who will carry the Republican banner in the Ninth Congressional District in opposition to John Flannagan, Democratic incumbent.

Republican leaders say it is too early to foresee who may be named, if the decision to oppose Byrd is made, but three men have been mentioned as possible candidates. They are Fred W. McWane, of Lynchburg; H. B. McCormac, of Winchester, which, by the way, is Byrd's home, and Maj. Henry A. Wise, of Northampton County.

Maj. Wise opposed Senator Byrd last time, but was badly defeated. At the same time the Democratic candidate polled a vote lighter than usually is accorded a regular Democratic nominee.

Invitation Is General.

McWane was Republican candidate for Governor in last year's State elections, but was defeated by George C. Peery, Democratic nominee. McCormac is popularly known as leader of the younger section of the Republican organization in the State.

All three are expected to attend either or both of tomorrow's meetings, which, Republican leaders have stated, will not be strictly reserved to committee members. Prominent Republicans from all parts of the State have been told they would be welcome.

Observers see in that informal invitation to party leaders an indication that the G. O. P. in Virginia is planning a definite move toward some of the posts now held by Democrats. That of Byrd is admittedly the keystone of political structure in Virginia.

G.O.P. Chiefs in Caucus At Harrisonburg, Va.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 27 (Spl.). Republican leaders of the Seventh Congressional District in called caucus here today determined to nominate a candidate for Congress to oppose A. Willis Robertson, Lexington, in the election this fall, and laid tentative plans far waging a vigorous campaign.

Leaders from counties and cities in the district, citing general dissatisfaction among Democrats as well as Republicans over CWA, FERA, AAA and NRA difficulties, expressed their belief that prospects compared favorably with the district's Republican year, 1928, when their standard bearer, J. A. Garber, was elected to a Congressional seat.

Although the question of prospective candidates was brought before the meeting, no individual was named as a possible opponent of the Democratic incumbent. Many leaders, however, are of the opinion that John W. Morrison, Harrisonburg, district chairman, will be the party's nominee.

The nominating convention will be held at Harrisonburg August 30.

Seeks Senate Seat

J. L. Graveley, of Danville, Will Oppose Byrd in Vote Contest; His Platform Deals With Four Major Campaign Issues.

Richmond, July 27 (AP).—J. L. Graveley, Danville real estate and insurance man and former editor of a prohibition newspaper here, today announced his candidacy for the United States Senate in opposition to Senator Harry Flood Byrd in a letter to the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Graveley submitted a platform of seven planks, the first of which is a promise to "draw my salary and pay my debts." The new candidate says that a sudden rise from obscurity to National honor may be a political wonder "but not necessarily a political blunder."

"I enter this race for the Senatorship as an Independent Democrat," the candidate writes, "and respectfully solicit the support of all voters not particularly interested in the reelection of Senator Harry Flood Byrd. This, in my judgment, will give me about 75 per cent of the State's votes."

As to his efficiency and competence, Mr. Graveley says:

"It doesn't seem that much of that is needed in our National Congress, but whatever I may be lacking I can resort to the 'brain trust' (lobby attorneys) for help, as others in Congress have been doing that for the past 40 years or more."

Other planks in the Graveley platform would provide that all women and children be employed in daylight time, except Saturdays; that farmers stay on and subsist on their own farms, letting city markets alone; that strikes be put on a "self-sustaining basis;" that the poor man be "let put his dollar in the bank on the same terms as the millionaire" and that he would "restore our time-honored principle of State rights, lost to the Southern States by the Roosevelt-Farley raid, if we have to vote Virginia dry a thousand times to do it."

Concerning prohibition, Mr. Graveley says:

"I am for no liquor at all, but if we must have it in legalized form, I prefer an equalized form of handling it that will give to each community its proportional share of profits, rather than a dispensary system that turns the profits into the State treasury."

Phone Co. Names Local Managers

Berryville, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—A system of local managers, designed to bring the executive department into closer touch with the consumer, has been inaugurated in Clarke County and adjacent sections by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia.

B. F. Gorham has been named manager for Berryville and Boyce. W. B. Pingley takes over the Stephens City office, and other local managerial appointments include J. R. Brown, Upperville and Middleburg; E. M. Fishback, Marshall and The Plains, and K. W. Gott, Purcellville, Hamilton, Bluemont and Hillsboro.

75 CCC Replacements Seen.

Cumberland, Md., July 27 (Spl.). It is expected that at least 75 more replacements to the Civilian Conservation Corps from western Maryland will be called up in a few days.

Murder Quiz Holds Suspect

Virginia Rail Worker Claims Life Was Threatened.

Charlottesville, Va., July 27 (Spl.). Richard H. Gibson, 65, railroad employe, charged with the murder of a fellow worker, Josh Kinzer, July 14, was bound over today after a preliminary hearing before Police Justice J. Callan Brooks.

Gibson said Kinzer threatened to kill him two months before a fight in which Kinzer was fatally stabbed. Gibson claims he was attacked by Kinzer and later by Carter Dudley, Kinzer's nephew. Unable to defend himself against them, he testified, he slashed Kinzer's throat with a small knife.

Dudley, a farmer of Crozet, admitted he struck Gibson with a stick after Gibson had hit him.

Bail for Dudley was set at $500 and $3,500 was required of Gibson.

Funeral services for Kinzer were held at St. John's Mission at Ivy this afternoon.

Four Amendments Are Facing W. Va. Voters

Charleston, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.). Gov. H. G. Kump today issued proclamations calling for votes at the general election on four proposed amendments to the State Constitution, including repeal of the State prohibition amendments, a capitation tax, changing date of inauguration of Governor and other elective State officials to early in January and changes in land book assessment records.

Eastern Shore Holds Political Spotlight Now

Candidates of 2 Parties to Attend Rallies on Peninsula.

Baltimore, July 27 (Spl.).—Political activity in Maryland will shift to the Eastern Shore over the week-end, with Democratic and Republican leaders both heading for lower peninsular points to attend campaign rallies.

George L. Radcliffe, candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, left today for Easton, where he will confer with midshore political leaders. Later he will stop in Salisbury, and Sunday will be in Ocean City, where he will confer with former Gov. Emerson C. Harrington, State Senator Dudley G. Roe, of Queen Annes County, and other shore leaders.

On the trip he was accompanied by Clarence W. Miles, former people's counsel. Returning to Baltimore, Monday, Mr. Radcliffe will stop at Snow Hill, Pocomoke City and Denton.

In the Republican fold big doings are scheduled at the family home of William P. Lawson, chairman of the Republican city committee, whose ancestral estates are located near Crisfield. Mr. Lawson has invited over 200 G. O. P. leaders from Baltimore and the Eastern Shore counties to attend a meeting, at which a decision will be made as to whether C. Wilbur Miller, Baltimore County Republican leader, will enter the Senatorial race.

Former Representative John Philip Hill, of Baltimore, already is in the race for the nomination, having filed his papers yesterday at Annapolis. He will run, he indicated, on the gubernatorial ticket headed by Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough.

The meeting at Mr. Lawson's home will be preceded by a picnic. Among those invited from Baltimore are Mr. Miller, former Mayor William F. Broening, George W. Cameron and George R. Norris. The only gubernatorial candidate to attend will be Harry W. Nice.

It is expected Mr. Boening, a power in city politics, will issue a statement after the meeting indorsing Mr. Nice for the governorship. Thus far Mr. Boening has remained silent as to his gubernatorial preference, and it is known that he has been under considerable pressure from the Goldsborough forces to declare for the Senator.

Zihlman May Enter Congress Race Again

Hagerstown, Md., July 27 (Spl.). A three-cornered primary fight for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Sixth District was foreseen today by western Maryland Republicans, with the possibility that Fred N. Zihlman, former Representative from the Sixth District, may enter the contest.

Mr. Zihlman, who was defeated by Representative David J. Lewis four years ago, has been making a tour of western Maryland the past week and is said to have received considerable encouragement from Republican leaders.

William A. Gunther, former State Senator from Allegany County, several days ago filed his certificate for nomination, and Harold Smith, of Montgomery County, who opposed Representative Lewis two years ago, is also expected to toss his hat into the ring.

The Democratic gubernatorial situation was expected to be further clarified upon the return of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, and it was predicted by Democratic leaders here that the race for the nomination would be narrowed down to the Governor and Dr. Charles Conley, of Frederick. Democratic leaders, who profess to know, say that Mayor Howard Jackson, of Baltimore, will withdraw upon Gov. Ritchie's return, and George L. Radcliffe, a candidate for the Senate nomination, will eventually announce his indorsement of the Ritchie candidacy. It was said that Mayor Jackson has delayed withdrawing from the race because of the uncertain condition of the Governor's health when he left on a trip to Europe. While Mayor Jackson has announced on several occasions recently that he would not withdraw, these Democratic leaders say that if the mayor finds that the Governor returns with improved health and remains in the race, he will withdraw.

Representative Lewis, Democrat, who recently filed his certificate for the Congressional nomination, will have no opposition in the primary.

H. Webster Smith, Baltimore, Republican candidate for the nomination for Governor, will make a tour of Washington County next Tuesday and Wednesday, with a mass meeting scheduled Tuesday night at a local hotel.

Mr. Smith came here yesterday with Dr. J. Harry Schad, Baltimore, his campaign manager, and Miss Helen E. Brown, Baltimore attorney, to arrange the tour.

Besides Mr. Smith, Dr. Joseph Irwin France, candidaate for the United States Senate, and George Henderson, candidaate for attorney general, will speak.

Mr. Smith and his running mates have just completed a tour of Allegany County.

Fredericksburg Rites Held for Mrs. Bowen

Fredericksburg, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah Doshia Bowen were held here today.

Mrs. Bowen is survived by a sister, Mrs. J. O. Boxyel, Fredericksburg, and a brother, William Bowen, of Washington.

Senator Byrd Seeks to Open Sky-Line Drive

Asks Cammerer to Make Highway Available as Soon as Possible.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 27 (Spl.). A move to bring about the opening of the Sky Line drive along the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains in the Shenandoah National area was launched today when Senator Harry F. Byrd, the Shenandoah Valley, Inc., and the Harrisonburg Chamber of Commerce sent telegrams to Arno B. Cammerer, director of National Parks, requesting that the mountain scenic highway be opened to tourist traffic as early as possible.

A similar move was made last summer, but the National Park Service declined to open the road for public use on account of dust and plans to macadamize it from Panorama to Swift Run Gap.

During the past year the macadamizing of the drive has been practically completed except oil and gravel top surfacing. It is understood the top dressing will not be placed until next spring. The road, however, can be used by motorists. Senator Byrd, in his telegram to Mr. Cammerer, said:

"Desire to urge the early opening of the Sky Line drive, which will do much to attract tourist travel to Virginia. It has been closed so long, public has become impatient. I will greatly appreciate anything you can do to bring about the opening at earliest possible date."

Russell L. Stultz, secretary of the chamber of commerce, in his telegram said: "Inquiries reaching our office indicate many thousands of out-of-State residents are eager to travel over Sky Line drive."

Chairman William E. Carson of the Virginia Conservation Commission, said the commission meeting called for today to sign the deed conveying by Virginia the 175,000 acres of Blue Ridge Mountain land to the Federal Government for conversion into the Shenandoah National Park has been canceled on account of the illness of Gov. George E. Peery.

Middletown Water Supply Is Curtailed

City Officials Alarmed Over Sudden Drop in Reservoir Content.

Middletown, Md., July 27 (Spl.). With drought conditions becoming more serious every day in the Middletown Valley, the burgess and commissioners today issued orders restricting the use of water to household purposes only.

The sprinkling of lawns and gardens and the use of hose for washing automobiles was forbidden under penalty of cutting off the water from premises of violators.

The action was deemed necessary because of the sudden decrease in the town's 800,000-gallon reservoir supply, the water falling 5 inches below the overflow pipe within the last 24 hours. It was said the flow from a number of the 14 springs in Catoctin Mountain from which the town secures its water supply practically has ceased.

Reservoir Being Built.

A new 1,500,000-gallon storage reservoir is under construction on the site adjoining the present reservoir 2 miles east of Middletown, but the work will not be completed for several months.

Brunswick, at the southern section of Middletown Valley, also is facing an acute shortage, the water today being 10 inches below the overflow pipe in the town's 3,000,000-gallon reservoir. In an effort to increase the supply, Brunswick officials are planning to renew an old wooden pipe line that formerly brought water to the town from Virginia.

Crops are suffering considerably. Many farmers say that unless rain comes quickly the corn and late potato crop will be almost a total loss. Dairymen also are becoming apprehensive over pasture for cattle and a decrease in the milk supply.

Rain Saves Crisfield.

Crisfield, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—Last night's heavy rain saved Somerset County farmers thousands of dollars, they said today, as their crops practically were ruined by an eight-week drought and heat wave that gripped practically all sections of the county.

From Kingston to Crisfield, about 10 miles, the crops were burning under the worst drought in 30 years. Farmers, fruit men and gardeners claim that the rain saved them from ruin.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 27 (Spl.). A series of thundershowers brought relief to this section of the Shenandoah Valley today.

The rainfall was not heavy, but helped parched vegetation. There was a vivid display of lightning. The only building reported struck was the barn of Jacob Blosser, just south of here. A decided drop from the 100-degree temperature followed the shower.

Nye to Speak At Hagerstown

Arrangements Made for 10,000 at Picnic of Retailers.

Hagerstown, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota will be the principal speaker at the annual picnic of the United Retail Merchants Association Club Wednesday at Rowe's Park.

Harry Walker, Baltimore, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland Independent Retail Merchants Association, will introduce the speaker. Judge John M. Pohlhaus, president of the association, will also speak.

Arrangements are being made to accommodate 10,000 at the picnic, the largest of its kind held here annually.

A beauty queen will be selected by the following committee: John D. Dunn, chairman; Roy A. Leiter, R. Bruce Carson, Mrs. Dau and C. Fred Bikle. Maj. I. M. Wertz will crown the queen.

A number of bands will furnish music. Vaudeville acts will be staged, while a fireworks display will be put on during the evening.

Pastor Is Installed.

Keyser, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.).—The Rev. Felix G. Robinson was installed as pastor of Trinity Memorial Lutheran Church last night. The Rev. A. B. Leaver, president of the Lutheran Synod of West Virginia preached the installation sermon.

First Maryland Infantry Will Stage Review

By Phil Aastensen.

Cascade, Md., July 27.—Maj. Gen. George E. Leach, chief of the National Guard, will arrive at Camp Albert C. Ritchie here tomorrow. He will remain for the Veteran's Day ceremonies Sunday, in the course of which he will review the First Maryland Infantry.

Gen. Leach will be met by an escort company, Company A of Frederick, and greeted with the customary 16-gun salute fired by the Kensington Howitzer Company. Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner 3d will represent Gov. Albert C. Ritchie at the annual ceremony Sunday. Gov. Ritchie is in Europe and will miss visiting the annual camp for the first time in 10 years.

Leaders of State veterans' organizations have accepted invitations to be present and review the regiment. Drum and bugle corps of the various veteran groups also will be present. It is expected that approximately 10,000 persons will attend.

Medals to Be Presented.

First Sergt. Gordon S. Gary, winner of the cup and medal for the highest score on the indoor range at Laurel, Md., armory, awarded by the American Legion Post at Laurel will be presented with the prizes following the regimental parade. Presentation will be made by Commander Bryant P. Hobbs and Lieut. Comdr. John F. Curtin, U. S. N. R., it was announced by Capt. Julian B. Anderson, commanding the headquarters company, Second Battalion, of Laurel.

Enlisted men of the Kensington Howitzer Company are throwing a "binge" for their officers tonight at Chocolate Park near the camp. All three were promoted when Capt. Clarence V. Sayer retired recently. They are Capt. David Parsons, First Lieut. Michael Pugh and Second Lieut. William Shoemaker.

Company G Wins Match.

Officers of the regiment are invited. Music by the stringed harmonica group of Company A and "stringing the long bow" by the old-timers will be features of the program. The entertainment is in charge of a committee headed by Sergt. Adam Seek.

Col. D. John Markey, commanding officer; Maj. Thompson A. Lyon, plans and training officer, and Maj. Frank Hines, commanding the medical detachment, today journeyed to Mount Gretna, Pa., to visit Pennsylvania troops in camp there.

The Remington Centennial match was won today by Company G of Cumberland. Lieut. John C. Golden and Corpl. R. B. Beckmyer rolled up a score of 96 to top Company K of Centreville by one point. The Company K team consisted of Lieut. Victor P. Gillespie and Sergt. William H. Richardson.

Nolting to Attend Bird Conference

Richmond, July 27 (AP).—Carl H. Nolting, chairman of the commission on game and inland fisheries, will attend a meeting in Wilmington, Del., next Monday, when Middle Atlantic States fish and game commissioners will discuss proposed changes in the Federal regulations governing the shooting of migratory birds.

An effort will be made to get Federal authorities to allow States to institute a stagger system of open seasons. New Federal rules will limit the open season on ducks to 30 days, between October 1 to January 15.

If the Federal authorities will permit States to split into zones, each having its own open season, shooting may be available to Virginians for considerably more than the 30-day period.

Begs Ride After Staff Car Quits

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—Even the colonel of a regiment finds it necessary to thumb his way along sometimes.

Returning to camp from a visit to his home at Frederick, Md., last night, Col. D. John Markey, commanding the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, was forced to hitch-hike from Thurmont to camp when the wartime staff car assigned to him quit cold.

The colonel managed to flag a military ride today, having been given first aid by the service company at Silver Springs.

Smith, Connor Honor Guests at S. C. V. Picnic

Leesburg, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Representative Howard W. Smith, of the Eighth Congressional District, and State Senator Cecil Connor will be the guests of honor at the first annual picnic of Clinton Hatcher Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, which will be held on the Potomac River, near Balls Bluff tomorrow afternoon.

The Loudoun Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will be the guests of the camp. Bruce McIntosh is commander of Clinton Hatcher Camp. Assisting him in the arrangements are John T. Hourihane and C. C. Saffer.

West Annapolis Honors Hyattsville Fire Chief

Annapolis, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—Noble F. Rushe, chief of the Volunteer Fire Department of Hyattsville and president of the Maryland State Volunteer Firemen's Association, was guest of honor tonight at the annual carnival given by West Annapolis volunteers.

Delegations from the three companies of Annapolis joined their West Annapolis comrades in welcoming the State president.

Lutherans of Three States Will Dedicate Valley Shrine

Mount Zion Church Rites Set for August 21 Near New Market.

New Market, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—More than a thousand Lutherans of the Shenandoah Valley and adjacent sections of West Virginia and Maryland are expected to gather at Mount Zion Lutheran Church, 4 miles west of here, August 21, for the church's first home-coming day celebration and shrine dedicatory program.

Members of the congregation are constructing the shrine from native limestone and crystals found in the vicinity. The Rev. Edward T. Bollinger, pastor of Mount Zion, says no skilled workmanship will be employed as it is the desire "to have the community express its own soul for art with the crystals and stones of the neighborhood."

The celebration also will mark the eighty-first anniversary of the first preaching in the Timber Ridge section, August 21, 1853, by the Rev. Dr. Socrates Henkel, famed Lutheran minister of the valley. Services on this occasion, as well as for nearly 20 years following, were held in the grove where the shrine is being erected and in the old Kipps schoolhouse nearby. Mount Zion Church was constructed in 1872.

The dedicatory address will be delivered by the Rev. G. Morris Smith, D. D., president of Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, Pa., and the Rev. Dr. W. J. Finck, former pastor of Mount Zion, will preach the anniversary sermon. The Rev. R. Homer Anderson, Richmond, superintendent of the Virginia Synod; the Rev. A. W. Ballentine, Timberville, president of the New Market Conference, and Elon O. Henkel, son of the congregation's founder, also will speak.

Efforts also are being made to have other former pastors of Mount Zion present. They include the Rev. E. H. Kohn, the Rev. E. L. Wessinger, the Rev. Enoch Hite, the Rev. W. J. Finck and the Rev. Albert E. Speck.

2 Petersburg Park Projects Will Improve Accessibility

Petersburg, Va., July 27 (AP).—Two projects now are under way in the Petersburg National Military Park, which are expected to render this historic ground more accessible to the increasing number of people visiting it.

The entrance to the Fort Stedman area, on the Petersburg-Hopewell road, is over the graded line of the Petersburg-Hopewell-City Point Railway. The company has begun lowering the grade that visitors may enter without the inconvenience of passing over a high grade. It is expected that the work will be completed in 50 or 60 days.

The hard surface roadway between Fort Davis, on the old Jerusalem Plank road and Fort Wadsworth, on the old Halifax road, now is under construction. It will be about two and a half miles long, and, including shoulders, 300 feet wide. Trees already have been cleared away.

The road, extending from one important fort to another, will pass through some of the most historic ground in the park and will render accessible a portion of the battlefield which has been little visited since trees and undergrowth grew up over the physical evidences of the bloody siege of Petersburg, June 15, 1864-April 2, 1865.

Virginia Catholics Protest So-Called Indecent Shows

Pastors Will Demand End of Objectionable Ones; Contests Attacked.

Richmond, July 27 (Spl.).—Motion picture exhibitors in each Catholic parish in Virginia will receive letters from Catholic pastors demanding elimination of immoral and indecent shows, it was learned today. Members of every parish will be requested to sign the individual pledge not to attend objectionable films.

The request to write exhibitors is contained in a letter from the Right Rev. Mgr. Felix F. Kaup, vicar general of the Richmond diocese, to all pastors in the State.

Means used by motion picture companies to combat the campaign against objectionable films include guessing contests with valuable prizes, entry in which can only be made by attending motion picture houses, he writes.

"Confidential information just received tells of negotiations by a broadcasting company with five of the largest motion picture companies to feature motion picture scenarios and film stars with valuable prizes for guessing the denouements of the scenario and the names of the stars," the letter states. "The voting tickets will be obtained only by attending the motion picture houses. This is to offset the movement of the hierarchy for decent motion pictures."

"The campaign," the letter also states, "does not aim at forcing either producer or exhibitor out of business, but it has for its object the elimination of salacious films."

Arson Probers Seek Bloodhounds

Hagerstown, Md., July 27 (Spl.). Following the announcement by Constable Charles Barnhart that fire, which early today destroyed the barn and contents of Chester Robinson, at Artemus, near Hancock, pointed to incendiarism, efforts were being made to have bloodhounds sent from Roanoke, Va., to trace down the incendiary.

The fire occurred while the Robinson family was visiting neighbors and had gained such headway when discovered that nothing could be saved.

Va. Liquor Turns to Water In 15-Mile Rail Journey

Richmond, July 27 (Spl.).—Liquor shipments of the alcoholic beverage control board have turned to water on a 15-mile stretch of railroad in the far southwest. Express company detectives are searching for the cause.

Six complaints reached the board about water shipped in liquor bottles. All of the trouble was found to be in one short stretch of railway.

When the disappointed mail order customers sent the liquor back, the board sent it to its laboratory to make sure. It tested pure water. An investigation was started. The board then filed claims against the express company.

The board has decided not to establish branch warehouses for distribution of supplies to the State liquor stores, but will continue its present twice-a-week supply schedule out of Richmond.

School Board Names Teachers For Coming Term in Somerset

Crisfield, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—Teachers for Somerset County schools for the coming year have been named by the board of education. Transfers of teachers from one school to another make up the bulk of the changes. Few changes were made from the roster of last year.

Miss Cora Sawcer resigned as principal of the Princess Anne Elementary School. Her successor has not been appointed.

Miss Hilder Nyquist goes to Kingston in place of Miss Catherine Wilson, who has been transferred to the Deals Island Elementary School.

Miss Emily Cullen will be the teacher at Rehobeth, replacing Miss Virginia Whittington, who goes to Rhodes Point.

J. M. Geopherah, after teaching 40 years, has retired. Miss Virginia Horsey succeeds him as principal at the Bedsworth School.

Miss Helen Dennis will teach at Marion High in place of Miss Graham, resigned. Miss Idella Horsey will teach at the Crisfield High in place of Miss Emily Pickett, resigned. James H. Clow, who resigned as instructor at Crisfield High to become pastor of the Methodist Church at Marion, is succeeded by Frederick G. Usilton, of Chestertown.

Teachers of other schools of the county were reappointed.

Buckhannon Bank Heads' Debts Listed

Elkins, W. Va., July 17 (Spl.).—Evidence relating to various note transactions was given today by Federal Government witnesses at the trial of officers and directors of the Traders National Bank at Buckhannon for conspiracy to defraud the institution, which began Monday in Federal Court here.

The Government's chief witness, A. H. Crowl, special agent in charge of the bank since its doors were closed October 15, 1931, testified on affairs of the institution from the time the alleged conspiracy began in 1923 to the closing of the bank.

Crowl said the direct liabilities of the defendants to the bank at the time it closed approximated $72,450, aside from their indirect liabilities as indorsers on notes. He said William Post, president, owed $15,000; his wife, Annie Hurst Post, $14,600; son, John Post, $12,900; U. B. Young, $8,310; John C. McWhorter, $7,175; Charles D. Munson, sr., another director, $14,466, and Sanford Graham, cashier, nothing.

1934 Fair Abandoned In King George County

Fredericksburg, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—No county fair will be given by producers in King George County this year, it is announced by officers of the King George County Fair Association.

Unfavorable weather conditions, resulting in mediocre subjects for exhibit, was given as the reason.

Staunton Records Praised.

Richmond, July 27 (Spl.).—Records of H. H. Wayt, clerk of the Supreme Court of Appeals at Staunton, were declared "in excellent condition" in an audit report by L. McCarthy Downs, auditor of public accounts. The period of the audit was January 1, 1928, to October 31, 1933.

Federal Air Board Inspects Langley

Langley Field, Va., July 27 (AP). The new Federal Air Commission arrived here this morning by airplane from Washington to inspect the flying field and the laboratories of the National Advisory Committee for Aviation.

The party includes F. K. Lane and A. J. Berrin, of Los Angeles; Edwin G. Warner, member of the National Advisory Committee and editor of the National Aviation Magazine, and Col. J. Carl Cone and Dr. J. C. Hunfaker, of Washington. Clark Howell, chairman of the committee, did not make the trip.

This afternoon the commission devoted most of its attention to an inspection of the flying field. Tomorrow morning the group will leave by plane for Atlanta. The party arrived at Langley Field as the first stop on a 12,000-mile aerial tour to study the Nation's available aviation facilities and what America needs to remain in the forefront of progress in the air.

Winchester Gas Price Raised on U. S. Order

Winchester, Va., July 27 (Spl.). After a visit yesterday by C. J. Shule, of Norfolk, chairman of the Virginia State petroleum code committee, gasoline prices were advanced 2.9 cents today to 20.9 cents per gallon, the prevailing price before a "gas" war was started several weeks ago.

L. H. Zinn, of this city, a member of the State petroleum code committee, said this afternoon the price was restored to 20.9 cents "by order of Federal authorities."

Auto-Truck Collision Kills West Virginian

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 27 (U.P.). Richard Thomas, 65, Holidays Cove, W. Va., was killed, and George Farley, a nephew, was seriously injured when their automobile collided with a truck here today.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Farley and their young daughter, other occupants of the car, received minor injuries. All were from Parkersburg except Thomas.

Radio Waves and Ripples

CONSERVATIVE residents of Takoma Park, D. C., had barely recovered from Commissioner Allen's announcement that local option on liquor would be put to a vote in September, when WJSV tried some announcing of its own yesterday — stating that leading wets and drys of that section will be allowed time on the air during the summer to voice their objections or tell why the flowing bowl should come to their bailiwicks.

But before the debate starts, Commissioner Allen and E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, will go on the air themselves Tuesday from WJSV at 9 p. m. just to clear up a few details.

Allen will merely explain the situation, he told this department yesterday.

"If they want bananas . . . we'll give 'em bananas," declared the Commissioner. Voters, in the first opportunity given them since 1848 to express their wants, will be allowed to decide whether Takoma Park will parch as a dry territory, enjoy the cheering cup with light wines and beers or just start stocking their cellars with everything that is sold under license.

Prettyman will tell of the rules and regulations governing the referendum.

WJSV's Harry Butcher is responsible for the radio angle of Takoma's dry-wet problem. He let the cat out of the burlap now so that WJSV will have the pleasure of broadcasting an account of the balloting when voting starts in September.

FLASH! A 30-minute description in English from Vienna of funeral services for Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria will be carried by Columbia networks today at 3 p. m.. Vernon Bartlett, news commentator of the British Broadcasting Co., will report a word picture of the ceremonies. The broadcast will be short-waved to B. B. C., which will relay it to Riverhead, L. I., and thence to WABC, the Columbia key station.

A CERTAIN brown-eyed lassie with luxuriant chestnut hair has been trying out her voice in dark corners of WRC's studio lately. Seems that she's preparing to face the mike along with two other gals in a new feminine trio intended to fill air space left empty these several months by "Three Maids and a Mike."

She went all shy and modest on us when we ambushed her on the subject yesterday. So her name mustn't be mentioned for the present. We can tell you, though, that she used to floor 'em during her high school days here with arias from light operas. WMAL carried her voice about that time.

The other two gals, whose names must also remain a dark secret, are veritable troupers on the air. One was an original member of "Three Maids and a Mike," the other is Mrs. Hunnicut. There! We've let the furry beast from the burlap. Shucks!

HENRIETTA SCHUMANN, hailed at the age of 8 as a child prodigy pianist, is now heard with Lud Gluskin and his orchestra during "Summer Interlude" series over a C. B. S. network Mondays at 8:30 p. m.

Hobby Horse.

COLUMBIA'S broadcast of the "Care and Feeding of Hobby Horses," that roundup of personal pastimes and unusual pursuits staged by the Leisure League of America, brought in a barrage of inquiries.

An elderly lady from down on the farm wrote: "Dear Leisure League: I do not know how to waste time. Will you please help me?" A Providence, R. I., fireman wanted to know all about certain stamps, ending with: "Living a quiet life as a fireman, I've had time to collect the best albums in the city."

A little girl, aged 10, wrote from Kansas: "I made some extra money by collecting my family's old shoes and selling them. But Mama told me I can't do this any more because I sold some shoes that weren't so old. So I would like another hobby."

Your Announcer Is . . .

EDWIN LEWIS ROGERS: One of radio's veterans who made his first mike appearance back in 1923 with Philadelphia's old WDAR (now WLIT). Most of his time is taken up announcing from WRC . . . that is, when he is not fussing with his garden, swimming, playing golf or tennis or accompanying his 1-year-old daughter on a tour of inspection of her daddy's office. His daughter, by the way, has the most charming blue eyes ever seen by this department. Big, husky, brawny of arm and melodious of voice, Rogers has played parts in numerous musical comedies, worked with electric companies and studied law. While at Columbia University, Ed made appearances over WJZ and WEAF, leaving his law studies to announce for WOR and later WTIC in Hartford. During his junior year he sang with "The Vagabond King" and also harmonized with a double male quartet at the Criterion Theater. Alois Havrilla, now of the N. B. C. staff, was of the group. Rogers came here three years ago after numerous radio appearances including a role with "The Three Musketeers."

Tamerlane, famous Mongol conqueror, who five and a half centuries ago overran Asia and part of Europe with his armies, and made for himself a vast empire, was the son of Teragai, chief of a small clan of Berlas in Asia. Slowly at first, then with unbelievable swiftness, he gained more and more power and lands, adding one after another of his neighboring nations to his empire. None were able to stop the spread of his power. Rebellions he put down with cruelties that sound incredible.

Tamerlane became Lord of Turkestan in 1369 after a civil war in which he led his faction against Hussian, a rival. From then on for 36 years, until his death in 1405, Tamerlane was a conqueror.

His empire spread until its northern boundary ran from the Great Wall of China to the center of Russia, to the Nile and the Mediterranean on the west, eastward beyond Karashar in India, and south to the Persian Gulf. The conqueror wore the crown of 27 nations. He was the head of nine different dynasties of kings.

Tamerlane was never unsuccessful in a conquest. He died while marching to engage his last great foe. Though cruel beyond description in war, he was a patron of art and science and was a kindly ruler in peace. When he died there was none to take his place, and the empire he conquered speedily dissolved.

Watching The World Go By.

Even had he not attained the age of 76, Col. Edward M. House would fit readily into the role of an elder statesman. But he refused to take advantage of his birthday as an excuse for breaking silence, at least so far as current affairs are concerned. "It's not for me to express opinions on what is going on here, or what is going on abroad," he told an interviewer. "I'm out of the picture; the business is in other hands and I'm merely an interested watcher at the side of the road where the world is going by."

Nevertheless, the man who sat at the right hand of President Wilson through the critical days of the World War, and during the most critical part of the peace negotiations, still keeps his mind focused upon the international panorama. Once he was a most important influence in the councils which shape the course of the world. Now he is content to watch the mad forces of discord and the divided forces of peace clash on a dozen fronts. It is with the serene composure and detached interest of an experienced philosopher that he now watches the kaleidoscope of human struggles.

Col. House's assurance that he never "broke" with President Wilson is welcome news. "What made it seem so," he says, "was the change wrought in Wilson after Paris." The President was sick and doubtless disillusioned. Apparently he acquired the habit of associating his troubles with his most trusted adviser. But there seems to be no evidence of any harsh words between them, nor the slightest indication that Col. House was less loyal to his chief in the end than in the beginning.

Their Homes On The Range.

Gov. Berry of South Dakota has injected a timely note of common sense into the glib discussion about moving "tens of thousands of persons" from the drought area along the eastern slopes of the Rocky Mountains. "Investigations of drought-stricken families," he says, "disclosed determination to fight it out." Dr. H. L. Walster, dean of the North Dakota Agricultural College, contributes the opinion that "we are becoming too excited about this drought."

It is apparent that any plan for wholesale evacuation of the sun-baked prairies will be resented by those who live there. Farmers of the Dakotas are accustomed to drought. They are not inclined to become panicky about abnormal heat and the absence of rain for one or even two seasons. They figure that next year they may be able to make substantial profits from the soil that officials in Washington would have them abandon. Moreover, they like the prairies. They will not exchange their homes on the range at the suggestion of nervous bureaucrats in Washington.

The problem has economic as well as psychological aspects. If these people are moved out of South Dakota where will they go? Commissioner Mead doubtless thinks they would be better off on reclamation projects farther west. But the record of the areas which the Government has reclaimed through irrigation is certainly not inspirational to families seeking new opportunities. Industrial cities are overcrowded with unemployed. Subsistence homesteads offer a very doubtful alternative—one that is not at all pleasing to farmers accustomed to cultivating the endless prairies. After evacuation, what?

Removal of the population from half of two States is a nice swivel-chair conception. It is typical "planned economy." But in actual practice such a staggering undertaking might only cripple the condemned area, without in any way improving the status of the families removed. Especially is this true when the Government is lacking in both machinery and experience for the scheme.

If we are going to embark upon a policy of shifting populations in response to economic needs it would be well to try the project out on a small scale first. How about settlement on subsistence homesteads in Alaska for a few thousand of Washington's patronage appointees?

Code For Whistles.

Several suburbanites recently complained to Baltimore & Ohio Railroad officials that the whistling by locomotives disturbs their peace of mind. The officials have replied that the law requires it; two long and two short blasts when approaching a grade crossing.

There the matter might rest but for several intervening factors. The law does not define either the quality or the duration of the long blast. Each engineer must determine for himself how long the ear-splitting shriek shall continue and certainly some of them dislocate the atmosphere with most unhappy effects.

When certain trains are due in at least one suburb, we are informed, conversation in all homes within five blocks of the track is suspended for several minutes. One of these trains has been dubbed the screech owl. This uncomplimentary designation is not alone due to the amplitude of the long blast, but also to the excessive vibrancy of its overtones.

In view of this it might be a good idea to have a code for locomotive whistles, administered by the Public Works of Art Project. Then let the whistles be tuned to a pitch which would sooth instead of irritate jangled nerves. Better still, a few bars of "The Flying Trapeze" or "Carioca" would serve the purpose of warning persons who are nearing a grade crossing, and also would give pleasure to suburbanites, whether on or off the trains.

War And Wall Street.

The sharp break in the stock market on Thursday led many observers to conclude hastily that it was caused by European war rumors. There appears to have been very little foundation for this assumption, although unsettled conditions in Europe no doubt had an unfavorable effect upon domestic sentiment.

The current liquidation marked the culmination of a period of declining stock market values resulting in impaired margins and concentrated selling pressure. The causes of the collapse appear to be due primarily to a growing pessimism regarding the business and financial outlook and to fears that the drought will have a seriously depressing effect upon farm purchasing power.

Although the effect of the "war scare" seems to have been negligible, it is significant that the danger of war should be so generally assumed to be unfavorable to the American security markets. The belief that war "helps business" and assists a rise in stock quotations has heretofore been widely held. It has been responsible in good part for the callous indifference, even open satisfaction, with which the prospect of hostilities in other parts of the world has been viewed by certain business and financial groups. Consequently, the dismay aroused by the mere possibility of another European war is indicative of a decided change in public sentiment, calling for an explanation.

In view of the boom that followed the outbreak of the Great War, the rumor of another European conflagration might well have been regarded as a "bullish" instead of a "bearish" influence. That the opposite is true comes from realization that our war-stimulated prosperity and our post-war expansion resulted in the catastrophic collapse of 1929. Since then we have had an opportunity to appraise the real costs of war in material terms. We realize now that billions of dollars loaned to foreigners to finance the conduct of a destructive war are irrevocably lost. Taxpayers and investors are correspondingly poorer and many of the industries that profited at the time are now suffering from a lack of export outlets for overexpanded plants.

Another war in Europe would find our investors and our industrialists more wary in dealing with European countries whose credit has been impaired by a combination of war-produced overindebtedness and its aftermath of prolonged depression. War would, no doubt, provide some new business for munitions manufacturers and producers of necessary war supplies. However, the increased self-sufficiency of present day Europe would permit of more rigid economies in purchases of foodstuffs and raw materials than would have been possible a few years ago. Hence, even the immediate benefits of a European war to American export trade and domestic business would be meager.

From the long-time viewpoint, the United States would have nothing to gain and much to lose if another war were to complete the economic ruin of Europe. We have learned that American prosperity is dependent upon world prosperity. We benefit in times of peace when other nations take our surplus in exchange for their goods. We lose if they borrow our surplus and use it for the conduct of wars that impoverish them and reduce their future buying capacity.

What Price The AAA?

Secretary Wallace intimates that the drought will bring about reconsideration of the AAA program. The agricultural surplus, except in cotton, has been virtually wiped out. An acute shortage of feed for cattle is feared. With one calamitous stroke, nature seems to have accomplished what was once the primary objective of the AAA.

The effect of the drought upon the individual farmer whose crops have been destroyed is the opposite of what the AAA sought. Secretary Wallace hoped to bring about a gradual reduction of stored-up surplus crops. Under the drastic conditions brought about by this unprecedented dry spell, price-depressing surpluses are disappearing almost overnight. But the farmer is left without produce to sell, and in many cases without food for his family. Only the higher prices for what he buys remain.

Certainly the AAA program must be reconsidered. The nature of the problem has now changed, not through the conscious planning of experts in Washington, but as the result of unforeseen weather conditions. One vitally important factor over which bureaus and brain trusts can exercise no control has upset the whole equation. Moreover, the drought has convinced thousands of farmers that the curtailment program has been a huge mistake.

No doubt this spreading conviction accounts, in large part, for Mr. Wallace's strained efforts to show that the AAA has "eased off" the effects of the drought. Now, when the corn crop appears to be seriously menaced by drought, Mr. Wallace talks in terms of the corn that has been saved. By raising the price of corn through loans to farmers, he says, consumption was reduced; by slaughtering 5,000,000 immature pigs, the feeding demand for corn was reduced. Thus the AAA has helped to maintain a reserve of 270,000,000 bushels of corn. In other words, a program designed to curtail production is being hailed for its success in cutting down that consumption which the rest of the recovery program seeks to stimulate.

This evasive effort to call defeat a victory is less important, however, than the future policy of the AAA. The original purpose of this "emergency" program was to dispose of surpluses. With that objective so nearly attained, the country would like to know what valid reason exists for continuing the huge AAA bureaucracy.

The Secretary of Agriculture has talked a good deal recently about controlling crops until export markets can be revived. But there are numerous indications that the artificial scarcity fostered by the AAA in this country is increasing foreign competition. Consequently, in reconsidering its position, the AAA is squarely confronted by the question of what, if any, further service to the farmers it can actually render.

Local Relief Policy.

Senator Walsh's intimation that his report as chairman of the Senate's labor investigating committee will criticize the District Commissioners for their relief policy is difficult to understand. This committee was organized to investigate the defrauding of employes by contractors doing work for the Government. If it is going to extend its mandate to an examination of wage rates on relief projects, there is a lot of evidence it should examine before attempting to draw any conclusions.

Most of the committee's hearings have been aimed at exposure of the "kick-back" racket. In this capacity Senator Walsh and his colleagues have rendered valuable service. They have exposed the "kick-back" as a despicable practice not to be tolerated under any circumstances. If necessary to end this sort of swindling, once and for all, remedial legislation will doubtless be recommended to Congress.

But a broad distinction must be made between the payment of fair wages by contractors erecting buildings for the Government, and the granting of relief to the unemployed in return for admittedly makeshift work. This irrelevant subject should either be the theme of a separate inquiry, or it should be prosecuted much more thoroughly than seems to be the present intention. As matters stand the digression is threatening to affect adversely the value of the committee's report on the "kick-back" evil.

It is important to note that the relief beneficiaries who complained to the committee are engaged in "made work." They have no contractual relations with the District. In fact they do not even hold jobs in the ordinary sense of the word. Being on the relief roll, they are asked to work, at prevailing wage rates, just long enough to earn their allowance. For example, a painter who might be able to earn $9 per day in a regular job would work only two-thirds of one day per week to earn his relief quota of $6 per week.

This rather pathetic practice, imposed on the District by the FERA, was not at issue before the Senate committee, however. Seven men—out of 13,000 on District relief jobs—had been classed as semi-skilled employes with an allowance of 75 cents per hour for some special work. For this "offense" District officials seem to have incurred Senator Walsh's displeasure.

Those in charge of the District relief work are trying to accomplish three major ends. The first is to spread the limited funds at their disposal so as to assure support to as large a number as possible for as long a time as possible. The second is to protect the taxpayer, from whom these funds are collected, by seeing that this money shall not be shoveled out as demoralizing doles without reference to the character of service rendered. The third is to keep relief payments from actively competing with wages paid for genuine labor, as has been happening all too frequently since the CWA swung into operation.

It will be most interesting to see whether Senator Walsh really proposes to attack these highly praiseworthy objectives.

Received In Confidence.

In Kentucky, where "Marse Henry" Watterson gave a shining illustration of how to use free speech, two newspaper reporters have been fined and sentenced to serve short jail terms for refusing to tell a police court judge where they got certain information. Some citizens of Danville hanged another citizen in effigy. The newspaper reporters knew about it in advance. The judge demanded to know how they knew and very properly they refused to satisfy his curiosity.

The Kentucky judge is asking the newspapermen to do what no reporter who is worth his salt would do. Moreover, he is trying what a hundred other tribunals have tried without success, for every effort to wrest the sources of information gained in confidence by newspaper men has been abortive.

Courts have sustained the professional relationship between newspapermen and those who supply them with material. Even if they had not done so, the first tenet of the profession is that reporters shall bear the brunt and onus in such matters. The Kentucky reporters are doing that and no doubt will continue to do so, without necessarily implying contempt for the court.

Danger.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing this letter from my bed, where I have been confined all this week by a severe infection of the foot. On day last week I went bathing in a local swimming pool during the morning when there were few bathers. Near me was a young man bathing who had a large running, bleeding sore on his thigh. I happened to have an abrasion on my foot caused by the rubbing of a new shoe. Two days after, I was in for this present siege of blood-poisoning and have been under doctor's care ever since. We feel sure my infection came from this other bather. It can be accounted for in no other way.

This is a dangerous situation and there is no reason why some day a general infection of bathers should not arise in the many pools of the district. I feel The Post might well raise the point that directors and employers of these bathing places should not permit any person to enter them if he or she has any signs of an infection. The Post might also warn people not to bathe in pools if they have any abrasion or wound on their bodies. I have learned my lesson. A TAKOMA PARKITE.

Troops to the Front?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every now and then one hears or reads complaints about the presence of the militia or troops at the San Francisco strike.

Will some of the kickers who have great foresight come forward and inform us just what would have happened if the exhibition of force had not taken place? Would the strikers have been more reasonable and peaceable in their demands?

The probability is that in the absence of troops all business would have been absolutely paralyzed, with distress and suffering on every hand, and the strike would have been prolonged indefinitely.

No strikers need fear the police or the troops if they obey the laws of the city and country. When enough Congressmen and Senators pay less attention to their own political fences and more to the general welfare of the country, a law will be passed forbidding the hideous general strike.

It's coming, sooner or later!

New Deal and Henry II.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some hide-bound old timers are forever yammering about the New Deal. Something never heard of, so they say. In developing his policies, the President is merely working back to old Saxon and Norman times. Of Henry II (1154-1189), one of England's strong rulers, we read: "He had a practical man's impatience of the obstacles thrown in the way of his reforms by the older combination of the realm, nor could he understand other men's reluctance to sacrifice the traditions of bygone days for the sake of undoubted improvements. Without any theoretical hostility to the coordinate powers of the state, it seemed to him natural to trample either baronage or church underfoot in order to gain prosperity. He saw clearly that England's remedy for the existing anarchy lay in the establishment of a kingly rule unembarrassed by any privileges of order or class and administered by royal servants."

Changing a few of the terms (House and Senate for church and baronage, and depression for anarchy) we have, in a much modified form, of course, a line on what the Chief's idea may be.

Why not? During the hard times we had government by "business." It failed. There was an agency to put people to work. Those who had jobs hung on by any old means, so did their bosses. Those who had feathered their nest for old age lost most of their feathers through bank and mortgage company smashups. Something had to come off and so if "regimentation" promises to make us all happy, why, by all means, let us have "regimentation."

F. VETTER.

For Theocracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The San Francisco trouble is the beginning of the end of the New Deal. There are too many jokers in the New Deal, and too many bluffs from the dealers.

The function of government is not to meddle with every man's private life, but to keep order, punish evil-doers, and make wise laws to enable the life of the people to flow freely. The New Deal tries to make every man good. Thus it plainly usurps the church's function, a function for which the New Deal is not fitted.

The real, behind-the-throne governing power of a nation should be the church, because the church is the vested moral power of a nation. America will take its rightful place as leader of the nations when a strong, rejuvenated church places God upon the throne of His eternal holiness, and fills the land with fountains and waves of righteousness. Constructive Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been a reader of The Post for a number of years. I frequently receive advertising matter boosting your paper's excellence.

I think you are making a mistake to ignore the churches and the ministers as you seem to do. You surely must recognize that the clergy represent a class of highly trained men who are scanning current events with a critical eye. I think I dare say they, as a class, are as well informed as ye editors.

Under former management, The Post used to ask ministers for contributions of their thought. Now you give oceans of space to mere stuff which the reader only takes a quick glance at and passes on.

On Saturday you cut down church news to the lowest amount and restrict it to some already well-known church in the downtown section.

I think you might popularize your paper by cultivating the support of the churches and all of the ministers of all faiths in our great city.

Gibbons Centennial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On behalf of the Knights of Columbus and the combined Catholic societies of Washington please accept our sincere thanks for the publicity you have given in The Washington Post to the centennial of the late James Cardinal Gibbons. We realize that much valuable space was given this celebration.

Cardinal Gibbons was the most beloved of American churchmen and we feel that your Catholic readers were highly pleased with the interest The Post displayed in him on the anniversary of his birth.

San Francisco Strike an Effort to Bar "a Form of Vassalage."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The attitude of the public and the press on the San Francisco strike is, in my opinion, a perfect example of the manner in which the American people jump at conclusions, and, as a result of which, are willing to take the "direct action" they so emphatically condemn.

I do not know whether the newspaper reports are accurate or not, but they carry the news that the so-called vigilantes "beat men with their clubs" on the suspicion that they were radicals, demolished furniture and tossed typewriters out of the windows of rooms believed to be quarters of radicals. Thus, these men who disagreed with the strikers constituted themselves prosecutors, judges and executioners. In this they were clearly guilty of the un-Americanism they profess to hate. If this not a form of the anarchy to which they themselves are so bitterly opposed, I do not know how to classify it.

The employers in this case were the Pacific Coast shipping interests who have received enormous subsidies from the American Government and who represent the class of financiers so largely responsible for the mulcting of the public. Gen. Johnson said the activity of the Communists "is a blow at the flag of our common country and it has got to stop." It has not been so long ago that he also said that this same class of employers "have got to play ball," meaning pay their employes a living wage. He was then referring to the Weirton Steel Co. and a Southern hosiery mill. Of course, wages is not an issue in the San Francisco strike, but recognition of the longshoremen's union is.

Has the American public ever worked itself into such a frenzy as to destroy the headquarters of an avaricious and unfair employer? The strikers have, but not the outside public, as in San Francisco.

I do not support the political elements which advocate violence to overthrow Government. With equal impartiality I oppose violence to those who are merely suspected of symathizing with such procedure.

As to the merits of this strike, it is also my opinion that the employers are as responsible for it as the strikers. If these "high-minded" business men were so solicitous of the public welfare, they could have yielded the "hiring halls" temporarily to the unions and submitted the matter to arbitration. In not doing this, they constructively refused the arbitration they contended was the duty of the longshoremen.

What the press has not made clear is that if these "hiring halls" are under the domination of the shipping interests it means that wherever possible, the nonunion men would be employed and the union men ignored, other things being equal. Hence the union is fighting for its organic life.

Finally, I desire to call attention to the fact that labor conditions in this country, terrible as they are in many places, such as the steel mills, the textile industry, the Southern cotton mills, the mines of the entire Nation, are far better than conditions in other countries.

This condition has not been brought about by the altruism of the American employers, or because the labor classes sat on their haunches waiting for it, but because organized labor made it so by fighting for it. It is well to note that nearly every gain they have made has arisen out of bitter conflict. Just as it has been said "the law is written in blood," so too has the amelioration of American labor been bathed in blood. There are a few exceptions.

The San Francisco strike represents an effort to bar a form of vassalage which every true American who believes in justice for those who have nothing to sell but their labor should oppose with all his power.

In writing this I may say I am not a union man and have never belonged to a union.

Forty-ninth State?

Postoffice, Saturday.

WHAT about a new star in the Flag—a new State in the Union?

You've no objection, but you ask where such a member of our National Family would come from. "There's nowhere to go east," say you, "and nowhere to go west. And we don't want to go south. And as to the north——".

Well, as to this last, Robert H. Mercer, publicist and Newfoundlander born, suggests that, since Great Britain no longer wants the oldest possession of her far-flung empire, and since the Newfoundlanders are as willing as Barkis, England really ought to exchange Newfoundland for a cancellation of her American war debt. Of course, everybody would be the happier for the transaction!

* * *

It is now almost exactly 351 years to the day since the great Sir Humphrey Gilbert "put into St. John's Harbor and took formal possession of the island for his royal mistress, Queen Elizabeth"—a country "as large as New Hampshire, Vermont and a considerable slice of Maine," not to count the dependency of Labrador. Yet recent debates in the House of Commons demonstrate that the mother country neither knows aught about it nor effectively cares to keep it.

Take this exchange of wisdom from the Parliamentary Reports:

Col. Wedgewood (concluding, in the Commons, an appeal for increasing Newfoundland's population by immigration)—"I believe that the more people you have in Newfoundland, the more prosperous Newfoundland will be."

Sir Bertram Falle—"What would they grow? Of course, the right honorable and gallant gentleman knows the country?"

Col. Wedgewood—"I do not."

Sir Bertram—"I do. There is nothing to be grown there. You can catch fish and kill caribu, but I doubt if you could grow even potatoes."

* * *

"Humble fisher-folk had a garden, a summer garden, in Newfoundland before the Dutch occupied what is now New York; . . . Scores of vessels from Spain crossed the ocean every year to fish for cod in its waters. . . . Everything that can be grown in Canada or New England can be grown in the ancient colony of Newfoundland."

* * *

After 1855, Newfoundland "enjoyed a full and independent political life just as completely as any of the other dominions. . . . Both men and women had the right to vote. . . . From the dominant party in the House of Assembly a ministry or Executive Council was formed, and this controlled affairs."

* * *

But then what?

"The depression, brought about largely through the loss or lapse of foreign markets for Newfoundland products, has served to show the people that Newfoundland can not live on the law of diminishing returns." So now they are beginning to look away from London and toward—well, toward the city in which The Washington Post is published.

* * *

Says Mr. Mercer: "The advantages to the ancient colony, if she became a part of the United States, would be many, though it would not be by any means a one-sided bargain. Great Britain would be glad to exchange it (sic) for her war debt; . . . she has completely neglected Newfoundland and apparently cares little about it. On the other hand, the United States would stand much to gain. The progressive and enterprising genius of American capitalists, and more particularly of the American Government, could turn Newfoundland into a veritable economic Garden of Eden."

* * *

Never mind if the wholesale price of fish is so low that Maine fishermen are at present starving. Newfoundland means more than fish: "She would furnish America with the finest harbors in the world. Geological surveys have suggested that in St. George's coal fields there is ready to hand at least 500,000,000 tons of coal. In Conception Bay, lying right on the surface, so to speak, there are unlimited supplies of iron."

* * *

Still, if you must talk about fish, why, fish are useful, says Mr. Mercer, for other things than eating—hand-to-mouth eating, that is:

"The teeming millions of fish in our waters, both coastwise and inland, are a source of exhaustless wealth, richer than all the mines of Peru"—that's exactly what he says!—"and the millions of tons of 'caplin' that annually press upon the beaches, the finest fertilizers in the world, if properly manipulated, would make the dairy farms of Vermont and New Hampshire far richer than they have ever been."

* * *

In short, says Mr. Mercer, with eager eyes turned southward, "the Stars and Stripes on the staff that has known only a British Union Jack since 1583 would be a spectacle to conjure with. And to that I say that, to all intents and purposes, Newfoundland is more American at this hour than she is British."

* * *

To be sure, "ethnically, she remains British; that is, English, Scotch and Irish; but her trade is with America principally, her houses are built like American dwellings, the goods on the display counters are American made, her theaters show American films, her laborers have found at the bosom of the United States sustenance for their families, while tens of thousands of Newfoundlanders have reconciled themselves to self-inflicted exile in America because they have found it a pleasant land and a good one."

* * *

There you are. We leave you to analyze that concluding summary.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Pick-Me-Up.

HAVING in yesterday's column, like Kubla Khan, "heard from far, ancestral voices prophesying war," I sat down at once and read a detective yarn. I won't say it did me as much good as a "prairie oyster" might have done. But it had its uses, and I pass the hint on to you.

THEO. HALL.

When I opened Richard Wormser's "The Man With the Wax Face" (Smith & Haas, $2), I expected something very Boris Karloff, something with the peculiar scenic gruesomeness of recent movies. After all, no notion is quite as horrid as an alteration of the face. Show me a ghost with three arms and I wouldn't blink. But show me a ghost with three noses and Ed outdo Mahomet's famous hegira of the year 622.

Yet though the jacket of the book bears a man's face worked out in plasticine (unfortunately, before it was photographed, some spalpeen had flattened the tip of the nose), you mustn't think the tale belongs to the cold-chill and creeps variety. It's something else, and rather better.

• • • •

Hal Keenland had come back from the war with his face mussed up beyond repair. So the doctors adjusted over his features a handsome crust of wax, faultlessly shaped and nicely tinted, and swearing that he walked self-confident and imperturbable. But until the end of the book he is only a name—"the man with the wax face"—a phrase which Joe Linley, the pert reporter who never refused a drink, flung into the tabloid headlines. And 60-point "banners" screeched across New York because Quinn Hanley, Wall street broker, had been found shot in the back of the head. The culprit might have been the missing "man with the wax face;" it might have been the dead man's stenographer and inamorata; it might have been his partner, or his telephone girl, or a gangster out of Atlanta, or almost anyone in this tale packed with genuine figures on the New York scene.

• • • •

The merit of Mr. Wormser's highly enthralling and unusual yarn is its light-of-day air. There is no hocus-pocus; this is the way the police and reporters go after a crime.

When burly, likable Sergt. Dickson comes up to the dead man's office, he brings no chemical apparatus, no microscope, none of those neat little envelopes for clues. He brings a cop to guard the door, another to work the switchboard, a couple of dicks to do the routine questioning of the office force, and a couple of police accountants to go over the firm's books.

All through the book it is the patient, mechanical functioning of Centre street and the whole police system which pulls through. No short-cuts—no inspired coup d'etat. If Linley comes out with bright notions, it's on the ratio of 1 idea to 3 quarts of Scotch. But I'd better leave the verisimilitude of that to the boys in the city room.

• • • •

One of the cheeriest bits is the high conference of the police chiefs, pure farce, perhaps, but not without point. The head of the Racket Squad wants to prove it's a racket crime; the Narcotic Chief argues that the case belongs to him; the deputy chief inspector for radical activities is sure that a Bolshevist will be found at the bottom of the woodpile.

Quite as funny are the mistaken orders about putting a drag-net for one man around a building in Union Square. Instead of a dozen, say, plain-clothesmen sauntering about, there arrive fully 600 emergency squad and reserve patrolmen all ready for a Red riot. Mr. Wormser makes it a neat fling at a "police commissioner who liked to get his picture in the papers."

No, the book is no ordinary and insulated little tale.

• • • •

But I should like to ask Mr. Wormser a pair of questions, the sort of quibbles which are fun but futile.

When Hanley was shot in the back of the head, with "the whole top back of his head missing," how on earth could the body keep sitting up—"the perfect picture of a Wall Street man contemplating a heavy day on the exchange?"

And further, when at last "the man with the wax face" comes on the stage, with the face "angelic, passive as it always would be," and he talks pleasantly with Sergt. Dickson, what are we to make of the following sentence, Mr. Wormser?

Motorcycle Crash Injuries Fatal

Edward Painter Dies in Charles Town Hospital.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Edward Painter, age 44, died in the Charles Town General Hospital late yesterday from injuries sustained when the motorcycle he was riding was struck by a car.

He is survived by his wife, mother, Mrs. Sarah Painter; one sister, Mrs. O. G. Dailiagton, of Charles Town, and three small children.

Traffic Signs Removed.

Hagerstown, Md., July 27 (Spl.). The last of a number of traffic signals in center intersections will be removed next week and curb lights substituted. The city began removing this type of traffic light about a year ago following numerous accidents.

Dollfuss' Death Brings Europe to War Brink

By Anton Angelo.

THE shadow of military conscription hangs over every able-bodied man in Europe today as the result of the crisis induced by the assassination of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss of Austria.

Even the successful bridging of that crisis by peaceful diplomatic means will not dispel that shadow, which—by a supreme irony of fate—has darkened the political skies of Europe on the eve of the twentieth anniversary of the outbreak of the World War—a gigantic conflict, which, incidentally, also had its origin in Austria.

The abortive Nazi putsch, which resulted in the murder of the diminutive Austrian chancellor, now has given the Fascists control of the government of Austria through the appointment of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg as chancellor to succeed the late Dr. Dollfuss, who headed the Christian Socialist party. Prince Starhemberg, a member of one of Austria's oldest and wealthiest noble families, is the chief of the Austrian Heimwehr, which he ordered mobilized at once, and is a monarchist as well as a Fascist leader.

If Starhemberg remains in power, it is not at all uncertain that an attempt may be made some time in the future to restore the Hapsburgs to the Austrian throne. At present, however, Starhemberg is well aware that the time is anything but propitious for the return of the Hapsburgs.

Sharp Breach Between Italy and Germany.

ONE of the main consequences of the crisis induced by the murder of Dr. Dollfuss is the precipitation of a definite rift between Italy and Germany. All the widely publicized interchange of amenities between Hitler and Mussolini when the German chancellor paid an official visit to Il Duce at Venice has now evaporated into thin air.

Austria, now under the protective wing of Italy, is Mussolini's special concern. Reaching what he believed was an agreement on the Austrian situation when Hitler visited Mussolini at Venice, Il Duce took it for granted that the Nazis would not attempt to control Austria. This policy is prompted by anything but altruistic motives on Mussolini's part. A grim realist, Mussolini practices what Bismarck called "Realpolitik."

In line with this "Realpolitik," Mussolini wishes the status quo to prevail as far as Austria is concerned. Above all, it is clear that he wants to preserve Austria as a buffer state between Italy and Germany. Germany, enlarged by Anschluss with Austria, would come to the Italian border.

Mussolini may have been flattered by Nazi imitation of most of the Italian Fascist rigmarole, but he does not love the Nazis so much that he wishes to see them neighbors of Italy. In this connection, it should be noted that Italy now has nearly 400,000 Germans under its sovereignty in the Italian Tyrol, not to speak of the Germans placed under Italian rule when the Trentino territory was ceded to Italy following the war.

Duce and France Acting in Accord.

HITLER'S bombastic blather of pan-Germanism, according to which his government expects to bring all Germans in Europe outside of Germany under the aegis of Nazidom, has provoked anything but enthusiasm for Hitler in Italy.

This explains why Mussolini has massed 50,000 crack Italian soldiers at Bolzano and Undine, near the Austro-Italian border, ready to march on Vienna the very moment the Nazis attempt to menace the integrity of Austria.

Fear of aggressive movements by the German Nazis also explains the unusual military activity of France and its concentration of troops on the eastern frontier of France, and it also accounts for the mobilization of the entire international police force of the Saar Basin, under control of the League of Nations.

Most amazing of all, however, is the willingness of France to act in accord with Italy for the preservation of Austrian independence. This, of course, can not be regarded as an enduring pact between two countries with interests so widely at variance as those of France and Italy.

But Franco-Italian animosities are forgotten temporarily under the urgency of the present Austrian crisis. France is also the sponsor of the Little Entente, consisting of states carved out of territories amputated from Germany and Austria by the Treaties of Versailles and St. Germain. These Little Entente states have most to fear from a belligerent Germany, for within the territories annexed by them from Germany and Austria are millions of German nationals, who, according to Hitler's pronunciamento, should be part of a greater Germany.

But back of all the mess brewing in the Austrian crucible is the crippling of Austria by the Treaty of St. Germain, which left Austria virtually in the position of a head without a body.

WITH the direst poverty and misery holding sway in Vienna, once the gayest and most brilliant capital in Europe, the capital now has practically no hinterland to purchase her manufactured products. Vienna has no seaport and is compelled to ship her few exports through Italian ports. The old Austrian Empire had a population of about 60,000,000; the present Austria has a little over 6,000,00, of which Vienna alone has more than 2,000,000.

The present area of Austria comprises less than 40,000 square miles and most of the land left her consists of Alpine regions poorly suited for agriculture. The country has few natural resources and little mineral wealth. Austria still is a most beautiful and picturesque country, but aside from the tourist trade, the country has few assets. And even the tourist business has been wiped out because of the political turmoil of which Austria has been a victim for nearly a year.

Thus Socialist and Communist agitators found listening ears in Vienna as they always do in a country where the people suffer economic deprivations. And while the German Nazis were scheming to gain power in Germany, they did not forget Austria. Nazi units were formed all over Austria long before Hitler rode into power across the border.

Dollfuss in Danger From All Sides.

WHEN Hitler assumed the chancellorship in Germany, the Nazi units of Austria immediately intensified Anschluss propaganda, and their agitation was the cause of many clashes. When Dr. Dollfuss, leader of the Christian Socialist party, became Austrian chancellor, the Nazis started to plot against him because he opposed the Nazi union with Germany.

The Nazis, seeing they could not persuade Dollfuss to change his policy, then marked him for destruction. For many months, they plotted his downfall. Only a few months ago, he barely escaped death from a pistol bullet.

But the Nazis were not Dollfuss' only enemies. There were the Social Democrats, whose fierce fighting during their revolt of last February almost wrecked the Dollfuss government. The Socialists also swore revenge. They, too, had Dollfuss singled out as a marked man.

The Nazis, however, acted first and with a brutality that has not only shocked the civilized world, but has also catapulted Europe dangerously near the abyss of another World War.

Another Letter From a Dad To Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My dear Louise: You have at last reached a point where I, with the best will in the world, am unable to help you.

I can not make your standards or your taste.

As I understand it, there is no question of the girl's guilt. She did a thing that indicates, or is commonly supposed to indicate, a want of decent moral character. If everybody knew of her transgression, few doors would be open to her.

Now you feel sorry for her and wonder whether you should continue to treat her as you always have.

Well, the most I can tell you is that you should be honest with yourself.

My interest is not in the girl, but in you.

As a general rule, a decent compassion and tolerance obligates everyone to forgive the sinner who repents his sin, though there is no such obligation if there is no repentance.

The thing that concerns me, however, is not the thing you should do, but the thing you feel inclined to do.

It is a weak and shameful thing to assume a holier-than-thou attitude and publicly scorn the sinner, to make yourself seem righteous, when the sin really offends you but little and repels you not at all.

Also it is shameful to pretend forgiveness, as an evidence of your Christian charity, when you really despise the sinner.

The important thing is that you should be true to yourself.

Each of us has some kind of standard, high or low, to which people must conform to win and keep his respect. You have such a standard, whether you realize it or not, and that standard reveals your taste and character.

You like some animals, while others are offensive to you because of their odor or manners. And you avoid the ones that offend you.

What thing, then, must a girl do to make herself offensive to you? That is the test of your taste.

Nobody except yourself can know how high or low your standards are. I hope they are high, for they will govern your own behavior in time of trial.

But, whatever they are, you will be guided by them if you are sincere, and I can not make them for you any more than I can make you like or dislike olives.

I can expose you to grand opera and jazz, but I can't determine which you will prefer. Love,

DAD.

Loss of Health Fund Is Faced

Curtailment of Work in Berkeley County Threatened.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Berkeley County's full-time health unit today appeared on the verge of severe curtailment of its work.

Dr. Edward Cameron, who is in charge temporarily, announced yesterday receipt of a letter from Dr. Albert M. Price, of the State health department, which disclosed that Dr. Ferrell, of the Rockefeller Foundation, had refused to "subsidize the Berkeley County health unit with its present personnel."

The "personnel" reference is to the recent nomination of Dr. Claude A. Thomas, this city, to succeed Dr. Cameron as director. The nomination some days ago was approved by the State health department.

Dr. Thomas' application for recognition was presented to Councilmen George A. Becker and Emory Kline, in the absence of Mayor C. H. Dalley. Dr. Thomas was told the city could not act without the approval of the State health commissioner and the Rockefeller Foundation.

The fund expected this year from the Rockefeller fund would have been $1,500.

Col. Salomonsky Funeral Is Set

Norfolk, Va., July 27 (AP).—Funeral services for Col. B. W. Salomonsky, who died at his residence here yesterday after an illness of 15 months, will be held at his residence Sunday.

Col. Salomonsky, former deputy internal revenue collector here, was one of the veteran National Guardsmen in Virginia. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War he was a first lieutenant in Company B, Fourth Virginia Infantry, and at that rank went with his company to Camp Lee, Richmond, in 1898. A few days later he was promoted to captain.

In 1907 he was elected major of the Fourth Virginia Infantry, and some years later was promoted to lieutenant colonel.

"25 Songs by Stephen C. Foster."

John Tasker Howard, who has written the best biography of the author of "Way Down Upon the Swanee Ribber," has just published a volume that should be of great interest to everyone who can sing or play a musical instrument, or who loves to hear others sing or play "Kentucky Home," "Old Black Joe," "Nelly Was a Lady," and the other immortal masterpieces of Foster.

Mr. Howard is a man of letters and a man of music; he has written authoritative works on the history of music, and he is an admirable writer of biography.

This quarto volume contains the complete music for 25 of Foster's songs, edited, with new accompaniment, by Mr. Howard. It ought to be in every household, where there is a piano. The songs are given both for solos and for mixed voices and for men's voices in quartets.

The book is bound so that it lies easily open on the piano and music rack—as easily as a piece of sheet music.

In his introduction, Mr. Howard truthfully says: "The songs of Stephen Foster form the most important goup of people's songs that have ever come from the pen of any single composer of music," and "no other composer has produced so many simple, unassuming songs that has survived their first popularity. Of the 200 songs and compositions that Foster published, at least 15 are still constantly sung, and not less than 50 are worthy of preservation."

His whole introduction, with the notes written about every one of the individual songs, is full of interest. There is such a revival today of Foster's songs that no volume of music could be more timely than this.

All the old favorites are here, and some that used to be favorites like "Old Dog Tray," "Gentle Annie," "Oh, Susanna," "Nelly Bly," 'Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair," and "Sweetly She Sleeps, My Alice Fair," &c.

It would seem an appropriate time to revive the once famous song, "Hard Times Come Again No More,"

Mr. Howard himself is particularly fond of "Ring de Banjo," and thinks it should be revived. The words and music, as is usually the case with Foster, go trippingly together:

De time is nebber dreary
If de darky nebber groans;
De ladies nebber weary
Wid de rattle ob de bones;
Den come again Susanna
By de gaslight ob de moon;
We'll tune de old pianna
When de banjo's out ob tune.

Chorus

Ring, ring de banjo!
I like dat good old song,
Come again, my true lub,
Oh! wha you been so long?

Bank Resumes Full Business

Cambridge Institution on Restricted Basis More Than Year.

Cambridge, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—The Farmers and Merchants National Bank of Cambridge resumed normal operations for the unlimited transaction of business today, after having been on a restricted basis for over a year.

To meet the necessary requirements of the Government, the depositors waived 40 per cent of their deposits in return for which they received certificates of participation. The remaining 60 per cent will be released immediately.

Seventy-five thousand dollars has been subscribed for new capital stock, including a surplus of $15,000. All of the old capital stock has been eliminated. About 70 per cent of the deposits will be in cash.

Milford Nathan is president of the Farmers and Merchants, which was organized in 1901, and served a large agricultural section. Other officers are: Vice president, John A. Baker; vice president and cashier, L. Thurman Phillips, and Samuel E. Brunnock, jr., assistant cashier. It is a member of the Federal Reserve System of Richmond.

Hail Does Damage To Tobacco Crops

Danville, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Additional hailstorms continue to do heavy damage to tobacco crops and are estimated to have done $250,000 damage in the last week in the old belt.

Last night a storm cut a path in Caswell County, N. C., just south of here, east to west across the whole county. The damage ranged from 10 to 55 per cent loss. The storm was freakish in that it was intermittent, missing some sections.

Chatham reported heavy damage in a 10-mile area north of the Pittsylvania County seat. Lightning again disrupted the electric power distribution and wires were deadened for three hours.

Most School Failures Blamed on Absences

Bowling Green, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—A survey completed by Division School Superintendent W. A. Vaughan in Caroline County shows that 60 per cent of the pupils who attended less than 75 per cent of the time failed to merit promotion.

Records of 1,398 elementary school pupils in the white institutions and 1,757 in the colored schools were examined in the tabulation; 2,035 pupils attended school more than 75 per cent of the time, and of these 322 failed, the records revealed. Of the remaining 1,125 pupils, 657 failed.

The National Gallery

HARVEY CROWLEY COUCH, appointed to Reconstruction Finance Corporation by President Hoover. Began career as drug clerk. Organized and owns three power companies covering three States. Native of Arkansas, is director of Flood Commission and Red Cross for his State. Carries medal he won hog calling. Proudly admits porkers come a-running when he raises his voice. Energetic, he hugs his desk, but is avid hand-line angler. A practical joker, he is roly-poly and in manner resembles a bashful country boy.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Virginia Milk Control Spread Over Protest

State Commission Votes to Enter Albemarle Market Area.

Richmond, July 27 (AP).—After an almost all-day hearing in its rooms at the State capitol here, the Virginia Milk Commission today decided to go into the Charlottesville-Albermarle County area for the purpose of stabilizing prices and regulating the production, distribution and sale of fluid milk for human consumption.

The decision was taken over a protest filed by a group of independent dairymen who, through counsel, questioned the legality of the commission's hearing, called to determine whether public interest required their entry into the market.

The commission's procedure was called "unconstitutional, contrary to all due process of law and established practice, tyrannical and despotic," by Homer Richey and W. H. Smith. They asserted that the milk and cream act is "designed for the sole purpose of legalizing a racket, in its practical operation and effect. It is subversive and destructive of the God-given rights of freemen, and is unconstitutional, null and void."

Favoring the adoption of commission rulings were the Charlottesville Health Department and representatives of the handlers of 75 per cent of the milk consumed in the area, the commission said.

Those opposing the commission's authority were Lloyd A. Ward, Thomas B. Moore, W. H. Smith, R. F. Wayland, R. B. Davis, B. J. Schruggs and others.

Their protest was similar to one heard by the commission with reference to the Roanoke market.

3 Counties Hunt Escaped Prisoner

Colored Man, Handcuffed, Fled Sheriff's Car.

Chestertown, Md., July 27 (Spl.). A posse of deputy sheriffs of Kent, Queen Anne and Caroline Counties are searching for James Johnson, 30, colored man who escaped handcuffed from the car of Deputy Sheriff Sobley Sparks, of Caroline County, after he had been brought here to aid in recovering jewelry he is alleged to have stolen.

While the deputy was conferring with local authorities the prisoner asked Deputy Sheriff William Skeggs to let him stretch his legs. He stretched them all the way down a street and into a marsh along the Chester River, handcuffs and all.

He is said to have been seen later in Queen Anne County without the cuffs, but disappeared again.

Shore Editors To Meet Today

Ocean City, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—The Del-Mar-Va Press Association, composed of editors and publishers of the Eastern Shore, will meet here tomorrow and Sunday.

The association will be entertained by the Chamber of Commerce at luncheon tomorrow. A boat trip will be made to the new inlet afterward. There will be a banquet at 8 p. m.

Col. Albert C. Cummings, editor of the Wilminton News, is president. William F. Melton, general manager of the Wilmington News and Evening Journal and Every Evening, is secretary and treasurer. A. R. Holcombe, of Berlin, is vice president.

Warring Kent Democrats Bury Hatchet

Chestertown, Md., July 27 (Spl.). A bruising primary fight between the Democratic organization faction and antiorganizationists in Kent County has been avoided by a compromise reached this week between the former group, headed by former State Senator S. Scott Beck, now comptroller of the port of Baltimore, and former Senator William B. Copper, president of the First National Bank of Chestertown and leader of the "antis."

The factions will split places on the ticket, as they did four years ago. The antis will name candidates for the three county commissioners, the clerk of the Kent County Circuit Court and the country treasurer. In addition, they will name one candidate for the orphans' court, exchanging that place for one member of the House of Delegates, whom they named four years ago.

The organization will name the candidate for the State Senatorship, two for the House of Delegates at Annapolis, the sheriff, State's attorney, register of wills and the remaining two members of the orphans' court.

Harrison W. Vickers, former State conservation commissioner and former State's attorney for Kent County, has withdrawn as a candidate for the Senatorship for "personal reasons rather than political." It is believed that Arthur Brice, of Betterton, a member of the House of Delegates, may get the Senatorial post. He is a close friend of Comptroller Beck. Stephen R. Collins, the State's attorney, is almost sure to be renominated.

In the anti group it is believed Leonard Wilson, president of the board of county commissioners, will run for clerk of the court, and that Samuel Loller will succeed himself as a candidate for county commissioner. Republicans are undecided whether to place a full ticket in the field or concentrate on a few places. It is certain they will not nominate any one for State's attorney. Mayor Charles N. Satterfield has been mentioned for the Senatorial nomination, but he has denied any such intention.

It is believed likely the Democratic ticket will win in the election if the Republicans nominate for any of the offices in Kent County. The only time the minority party has won has been when a split between the Democratic factions caused ill feeling in the general election.

It also is believed the Democrats will indorse the Ritchie State ticket and back the Governor for a fifth term.

Court Issues Writ for Kent

Kidnaping Defendant Held by U. S. Ordered to County Courts.

Fincastle, Va., July 27 (AP).—A writ of habeas corpus ad prosequendum (produce the person for prosecution) was ordered yesterday by the Botetourt County Circuit Court directing John White Stuart, marshal for the Federal Court of the Western Division of Virginia, to bring Robert C. Kent before the Botetourt court September 3, where he is charged with the kidnaping and murder of Mrs. Mary Jane Hastings in two indictments returned July 14, by a special grand jury.

Kent has been held by Federal authorities in Roanoke Jail since June 30 on charges brought under the Lindbergh kidnaping law and a preliminary hearing in Federal Court is set for July 30.

The writ was issued by Judge Benjamin Haden on motion of Commonwealth Attorney Philip Kohen, of Botetourt County, after Kohen's return from a trip to Washington late Wednesday. County Officer O. D. Lemon and W. M. Minter, a Fincastle attorney, accompanied Mr. Kohen to Washington. After their return here, they went to Covington, Thursday, to petition the court for the habeas writ. Joseph H. Chitwood, district attorney for the Federal Court of the Western Division of Virginia, accompanied them to Covington.

It was expected the writ would be issued today.

Mother of Byrd Told He Is Safe

Winchester, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—A message from Little America to Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, sr., mother of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, received today by radio and telegraph, advised her not to be uneasy concerning the safety of her son.

The message also said that the reported injury to Admiral Byrd's arm is not believed to be of a serious nature and that it had been caused by cranking his radio broadcasting outfit.

Another attempt to reach the advance base of the explorer may not be made until the last of August or early in September, it was said, when the Antarctic night will be over.

W. I. Henkel Dies In West Virginia

Charles Town, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.).—William Isaac Henkel, 79, died early this morning at his home in Knoxville, Md., near here, after a short illness.

He is survived by his widow and three sons. The funeral will be held from his home, Sunday, and interment will be in St. Mark's Cemetery, Petersville, Md.

The Rev. Mark J. Enkins, Episcopal minister, of Brunswick, Md., assisted by the Rev. H. C. Erdman, Lutheran minister, of Brukettsville, Md., will have charge of the services.

Church Auxiliary Calls Charles Town Meeting

Charles Town, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.).—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Charles Town Presbyterian Church has arranged a special meeting for Monday.

The Rev. Brooks McLane, superintendent of the Texas-Mexican Institutional Institute for Boys, Kingsville, Tex., will have charge of the program.

25 Per Cent Increase Demand by Potters

Wheeling, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.). A general wage increase of 25 per cent, effective October 1, when the present scale expires, today was demanded by the National Brotherhoods of Operative Potters, representing 10,000 skilled workers in West Virginia, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other States.

The brotherhood asks for a rule against employment of married women whose husbands earn more than $20 a week.

Dern, Ickes Will Greet President

To Be on Hand August 3 at Portland to Meet Roosevelt.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

When President Roosevelt arrives in Portland, Oreg., on August 3, aboard the U. S. S. Houston, he will be met by the Secretary of War, Mr. George H. Dern, who will make the trip back to Washington with the Chief Executive.

The Secretary of War, Mrs. Dern and their daughter, Miss Betsy Dern, are now in Panama, and will continue their trip to Los Angeles by boat next week. After spending a short time in that beautiful city, the Secretary will fly to Portland to greet his chief.

May Be Reunion.

Perhaps there will be a reunion with the President and his official family, or at least several members of the Cabinet, when the Houston puts in to Portland, for the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold Ickes, has left Washington for a vacation of several weeks in the West, and plans to be on hand when the President arrives.

Maj. Gen. E. M. Markham, chief of the Engineer Corps of the Army, will also be in Portland when President Roosevelt arrives, and will escort the Chief Executive on an inspection of several projects under construction by the Army engineers.

Makes Appointments.

While the President was vacationing in the Hawaiian Islands he did not fail to make two young men in Washington happy, by designating them to take the entrance examinations of March 5, 1935, for West Point.

These two young men appointed by the President, as young men in each of the 48 of the United States are appointed by their members of Congress, are Sanford Wayne Hickey, son of Maj. J. H. Hickey, U. S. A., and Robert Watson Crandall, son of Maj. W. M. Crandall, of Mitchell Field, Hempstead, Long Island. Both of these appointments are of Army boys, which is frequently the case among the Presidential appointees, as Army and Navy men have no permanent address, do not vote, and therefore have not representation in Congress.

Attaches Honor Capt. Kobayashi

Luncheon Is Tendered at Mayflower.

Capt. Masashi Kobayashi, naval attache of the Japanese Embassy, was the honor guest at a luncheon given yesterday at the Mayflower by the naval attaches and assistant naval attaches of the various embassies now in Washington.

The company included Capt. William D. Puleston, director of naval intelligence, U. S. N.; Capt. A. R. Dewar and Engineer Commander J. S. Orr, of the British Embassy; Commander William MacKinley, of the Argentine Embassy; Commander Federico Monreal y Pilon, of the Spanish Embassy; Capt. Louis Sable, of the French Embassy; Capt. Robert Witthoeft, of the German Embassy; Mr. Paul Y. Oras and Mr. Alexander M. Yakimichev, of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and Commander Yosiyuki Itimiya, of the Japanese Embassy.

International Art Group Plans Trip

The organization by the International Art Forum of a visit to the Baltimore Musuem of Art, with the purpose of viewing the Cone collection, one of the most important collections of modern art in this country, is progressing satisfactorily.

Members of the forum and other persons interested in making the trip will meet Tuesday at 8:30 p. m., at the residence of Mr. Francis Jean Reuter to complete plans for the trip and to take part in a discussion of the masters whose works are to be viewed.

Miss K. P. Gardner To Wed August 17

Mr. and Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, jr., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Katherine Peabody Gardner, to Mr. Parmely Webb, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Parmely W. Herrick, of Cleveland, which will take place on Thursday, August 17, in Trinity Church, Boston.

A reception will follow the ceremon. in the home of the bride's parents, Green Hill, at Brookline, Mass.

Mr. Herrick is a grandson of the late United States Ambassador to France, Mr. Myron T. Herrick.

Miss Duehring Now Bride of Ensign Young

Marriage Solemnized in Academy Chapel at Annapolis.

The Naval Academy Chapel at Annapolis was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock of Miss Marie Louise Duehring, daughter of Mr. Julius H. Duehring, and the late Mrs. Duehring, and Ensign Melvin Thayer Young, U. S. N. R., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thayer Young, of Ashton Heights, Va.

The ceremony was performed by Chaplain W. M. Thomas and the chapel was adorned with summer flowers, palms and ferns.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin with a deep yoke of chantilly lace. The same lace bordered the long tulle veil which was caught with sprays of orange blossoms. The bouquet was of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Minnie Robey, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a frock of pink lace with a large hat of pink chiffon and straw. She carried pink roses and delphinium. The bride's young sister, Gloria June, was flower girl, and wore a frock of pink organdie over pink taffeta, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet in a lace holder.

Mr. Jack Young was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Lieut. J. B. Cleland and Ensign William Schofield, both of the U. S. N. R. After receiving the congratulations of their friends at the church, the young couple left for a wedding trip, the bride wearing a suit of rose printed crepe, with a white hat and accessories. They will go to Miami, Fla., by water, and on their return will be at home after August 9, in Lyon Park, Va.

Ensign Young was graduated from the Naval Academy in the class of 1932, and was a student at the University of Maryland in 1926-28. He is a member of the Delta Sigma Phi Fraternity.

Denig Reenters Manlius School

Father Was Graduated There in 1901.

Young James L. H. Denig, son of Col. and Mrs. Robert L. Denig, of Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va., has reentered the Manlieus School for the school year, 1934-35.

He will go to Manlieus for the opening of school on September 24.

Manlieus is one of the best known military and college preparatory schools in the country. Founded in 1869 as St. John's School, it will begin its sixty-sixth year in September.

Manlieus trains its students through a broad cultural course including sensible military instruction and sound physical training. The head master of the school is Col. Guido F. Verbeck, D. S., whose father, the late Brig. Gen. William Verbeck, was president of the school for 42 years.

Col. Denig graduated from Manlieus in 1901.

The Driver's Seat.

The man in the driver's seat—whether of an automobile or a one-horse shay—has always received certain respect. Regardless of who charted the way, it is he who determines both the route and destination of the vehicle in his charge.

In bridge it is generally the player who holds the majority of Aces and Kings, reinforced with favorable distribution, who occupies the driver's seat during the bidding. Sometimes distribution alone permits a player to dictate largely the final contract either by driving the opponents to a contract which they can not make or accepting a paying penalty in lieu of a greater loss. However, when a player decides to drive his opponents to a contract which they can not make or accepting a paying penalty in lieu of a greater loss. However, when a player decides to drive his opponents to the breaking point, he should be sure that they do not have an even better alternative destination than the one which was their original goal.

Take as an example the hand discussed today, which was played in a duplicate match participated in by some very strong players in New York City.

1—A better bid than showing the diamond suit at the point. Two diamonds would be too weak and three diamonds entirely too strong. The bid of three hearts is ideal.

2—East can see that in all human probability he can make nine tricks. He plans upon outbidding the opponents, regardless of the contract they may undertake.

3—After North's double jump a bid of four hearts would be inadequate. The bid of four spades is the first signal of the approaching slam.

5—East is battling against the opponents' impending slam. If he can buy the contract at five spades doubled, it is still a paying sacrifice, whether or not opponents can make a slam.

6—South refuses to be turned aside. He now shows three aces and the king of a bid suit.

7—South's last bid was all the information North needed to undertake the grand slam.

8—East fears North and South can make seven. They apparently have ten tricks available in diamonds and hearts, one in clubs and the thirteenth trick should be provided by a ruff of a losing spade.

9—A beautiful forcing pass. South does not know whether to double or to attempt to make a grand slam in no-trumps. The decision whether to double or to bid again must be left to his partner.

10—With twelve tricks in sight, North feels that the thirteenth should become available by means of a squeeze.

In the play a small spade was opened, East played the queen, and South of course won with the ace. Five rounds of diamonds were played, followed by five rounds of hearts, declarer carefully maintaining this order so that at the eleventh trick the lead would be in his own hand. East was unable to discard on the last heart without giving up a stopper in either one of the black suits.

Although East, when he started on his sacrificing career, had dismissed the possibility of the making of a grand slam in notrump, he nevertheless was correct in attempting a sacrifice against the Grand Slam in hearts. He felt that in notrump he could probably win a club trick and thus did not fear that contract. The result of East's daring sacrifice and North and South's equally daring and brilliantly accurate bidding was that this North and South earned a clear top-score on the board.

Golf Tourney Holds Interest At Hot Springs

Social Activities Attract Attention, Cascades Pool Popular.

Hot Springs, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—The Middle Atlantic golf championship has been absorbing most of the attention around Hot Springs this week, but the social side of life has been unusually lively as well.

The birthday of the Greek Minister, Charalambos Simopoulos, was celebrated Wednesday evening at the Cascades Club with a party arranged by a committee. Tables were set up on the fourteenth tee of the Cascades course for a cocktail party and a buffet supper for 60, and fifty additional guests arrived for the concert, which followed later in the evening. Cora Glade, contralto, gave a program of French, German and Russian songs, with several in English as encores.

Among the guests at the supper were Mr. and Mrs. Lee P. Warren and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin, Mrs. J. Abert Story and her two daughters, Mrs. Edward L. Reed and Miss Jacqueline Story; Mr. and Mrs. Irwin B. Laughlin and their daughter, Miss Gertrude Laughlin; Maj. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, Miss Eleanor Preston, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley L. Wolff and Miss Eliza Kent Wolff.

Hearts of Women Go Cold; Austria Is on Front Pages As It Was 20 Years Ago

By Malvina Lindsay,

A STRANGELY far-away and naive world, that of July, 1914. Women in hobble skirts and huge feathered hats; girls swaying in the tango and the turkey trot; ragtime music shrieking from every phonograph; Mrs. O. P. Belmont giving a Chinese fete at Marble House in Newport; housewives at back fences discussing the high cost of beefsteak; English suffragettes being forcibly fed; newspaper headlines announcing: "Eugenics Won't Banish Cupid" and "Blondes Are on the Wane."

"Women have converted the New Freedom into license," thundered Bob Jones from his gospel tent on Broadway.

"If women would go to market and reform their present style of dress, there would be fewer divorces," observed Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, who had appeared at Mrs. Belmont's ball in a costume once worn by the daughter of the Emperor Keen-Lung.

• • • •

"WOMEN are exhibiting more sense than ever before," maintained Inez Milholland Boissevain, young suffrage militant.

"Women are less willing to submit to indignities and they have greater economic freedom," asserted Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, as head of the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

Still, there was woman suffrage, a gleam on the horizon.

The Secretary of State indorsed suffrage and Representative William E. Humphrey challenged President Wilson to declare his stand on it. The National Education Association, meeting at St. Paul, indorsed it, as well as equal pay for women and men school teachers. Dr. Shaw announced that votes for women would be pushed before Congress. And Marcel Prevost, in a new book, assured the world that the advancing tide of feminism would not bring about the disappearance of the kiss.

• • • •

July 28, 1914, 20 years ago today, and Mme. Caillaux crowded off the front page by—Austria.

Women readers' faces sobered and then a smug warmness filled their hearts. Their own husbands, sons and lovers were safe. Austria was so far away.

July 28, 1934, and movie censorship, nudists, shorts, working wives, equal pay for women workers, divorce in high places, women politicians, Paris styles, Hollywood romances and Dillinger's molls crowded off the front page by—Austria.

Women readers' faces are sober and a memory freezes their hearts.

Twenty years!

Depression Ups Fishing Permits

Caste of Izaak Walton Lures Feminine Anglers.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

FEEDING the family in the depression, and at the same time getting a good day's sport, has been happily solved in a large scale way by a Nation-wide pursuit of fish. Women are rallying to the cause, and according to the Bureau of Fisheries, a great many more women than ever before have taken out fishing licenses.

Popularity of fishing always goes up during a depression, the bureau has found; it's a cheaper sport than golf, for example, and the result is undeniably food. Even a small family would grow thin on a diet of golf scores.

But during the last year or so, the proportion of women has been more marked than at any previous time. There are 4,858,058 persons in the country who have fishing licenses, and of these approximately one out of every 20 is a woman.

The fishing preserve set aside for women in the Branford River, Conn., with its woman warden seems to have started something, for recently a section of Spring Creek, Pa., has been dedicated to fisherwomen.

Different States are making special efforts to interest women in fishing. In Massachusetts, for example, a license costs a woman $1.25, whereas a man pays $2.

A mark of the figures that total up from the new increase of women turning to fishing is found in Michigan, where last year licenses were taken out by 9,365 nonresident wives.

Cream From Creamless Milk Is New Discovery

Milk that has yielded the usual amount of cream can be made to produce another cream crop by the latest development of the dairy industry. Known as "plastic cream," it is made by whizzing surplus milk at breakneck speed in a centrifugal machine at higher temperature than that used in the ordinary cream separator.

When plastic cream comes out of the machine it is in glutinous form. As it cools it becomes plastic, finally reaching the consistency of unfinished butter. Only working is necessary to turn the substance into butter.

Long Hours Given Credit For Success

INSPIRATION and genius had precious little to do with his inventions, declared Frank Julian Sprague, internationally known electrical wizard when he celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday a few days ago in New York.

Perspiration and long hours are responsible for his inventions, he asserted. And he prefers they be called discoveries rather than inventions.

"Most discoveries people call inventions are merely the engineering solutions of certain problems," he explained.

Sprague admitted inspiration may have guided him when he devised his masterpiece, the multiple unit system for electric transportation. But his other inventions—or discoveries—were accomplished through hard work alone.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

A CLARENDON reader offers her views today on the question raised in this column recently as to whether a child should be punished for dissecting the family clock.

"The crux of the whole problem," she says, "lies in the cause, 'if he does something he definitely knows is wrong he will be punished.' The motive is all important and must be delved out by the parent before any action is taken.

"It is true the law of cause and effect is inexorable. So, if Johnny carelessly destroys property, why not make him pay for the spoiled article from his allowance or let him earn enough by helping you to make up the deficit?

"I agree with the article that whipping is the poorest, least constructive form of punishment.

"Hoping for more of these provocative discussions, I remain, Mrs. C. E., Clarendon, Va."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Is it possible to love two men equally at the same time? I am 25 years old and have been married 5 years. I have two sons, aged four and two. My husband is the finest, kindest man in the world and we have been through hard times together. I love him deeply. But a year ago a man whom I fell head over heels in love with when I was just 18, came back into my life.

• • • •

He was the first love of my life, and we had planned to be married. But he had a bad reputation as a boy. He was called a no-good, although I didn't know this until I had been going with him for some time.

• • • •

He broke dozens of dates with me and finally broke my heart. My parents insisted that I give him up. He left town and wrote me to say that he would never bother me again, but that he would never forget me.

Shortly afterward I started going with the man I married. He looked a great deal like the first man and had the same magnetic personality and lovable qualities, without the faults. Our marriage has been perfectly happy. But the first man has come back to town. He has reformed completely, has a fine position, and has completely lived down his past. He no longer drinks.

• • • •

Since he belongs to the same crowd of people I have always known, I have been seeing a lot of him, but never alone. He has become good friends with my husband, and visits our home quite frequently. One evening a few weeks ago, when we were dancing together, he told me he still loves me and would give anything in the world to have me for his wife.

• • • •

All the old feeling I ever had for him has been rekindled. Yet I still love my husband as much as ever. I have told my husband just how I feel. He says he thinks it perfectly possible for a person to love two people at the same time. I think the reason I love them both the same way is because they are the same type of men. What can I do about it?

Stay With Husband.

DEAR LOVELORN: What you can do about it is to put this so-called first love out of your mind and your life entirely. Tell your husband you have been a fool, and ask him for the sake of all concerned to drop this man as a friend. It's a poor friend who makes overtures to one's wife.

• • • •

Definitely forbid the old flame ever to mention love to you. If he had a spark of character, he would have kept out of your life. Certainly if he really cared for you, he should never attempt to cloud your happiness or steal your peace of mind.

• • • •

What were you thinking of doing about it? Divorcing your husband, and transferring yourself and your half-orphaned sons to the other man's roof, there, as his wife, to pine for your second love? That, or the course I have outlined, are your only alternatives.

• • • •

Love grows with shared experiences of happiness, hardship, sorrow and sacrifice. Therefore, it's impossible to love the other man equally and in the same way you love your husband and the father of your children. But even if you loved him more, and in a different way, that would be no excuse for letting down the barriers of your life to include him. Your life and your devotion belong to your children and to their other parent, since neither he nor they have failed you in any respect.

• • • •

You're just playing with fire, and fancying yourself in the role of fascinator. Such dalliance sends marriage and integrity on the rocks. The other man is probably intrigued more with your presumable unattainability than with yourself. Rakes are great on poking the ashes in search of embers.

M. H.

Sport That Feeds the Family

The greater the depression, the bigger the fish—and the more women out to catch them.

Invited to the Senate Floor

Underwood & Underwood.

Whenever the United States Government wants to learn the economic standing of silk or rayon it calls upon Miss Ruth Peterson, one of two women experts in the textile division of the Tariff Commission.

Silk Expert Cherished Rayon Through Its Ailing Childhood

Now That It's Grown to Such a Flourishing Maturity Miss Ruth Peterson Says Manufacturers Have Beaten Silk Worms at Their Game.

By Virginia Lee-Warren.

TO most women rayon is simply a material that progressed from stiff, shiny stockings and glossy pink panties to soft lovely fabrics that can't be distinguished from real silk except in laboratory analyses.

But to Miss Ruth Peterson, silk expert with the United States Tariff Commission, rayon is a precocious child who came close to being downed by growing pains. During the years it was wobbling about she stood by, confident it would catch up with silk some day.

"It's my baby," laughed slender, brown-eyed Miss Peterson yesterday at her desk in the textile division of the Tariff Commission. "When I came here in 1922 the baby was so new it hadn't even been named, but was referred to as artificial silk. Within the next few years the word 'rayon' came into general use."

When Cornell-educated Miss Peterson joined the staff of the textile division, her first task was writing a survey of the artificial silk industry. This called for a field trip to Marcus Hook, Pa., where artificial silk was first manufactured on a commercial scale in this country.

A Secret Business.

"Production at that time was shrouded in secrecy," said the silk expert. "I couldn't have gotten inside the plant if I hadn't had Government credentials. I learned afterward I was the sixth person to see spruce wood converted into artificial silk."

In 1922 when Miss Peterson made her survey for the Tariff Commission there were only four companies in the United States making rayon. Their combined production amounted to little more than 23,000,000 pounds. Last year there were 18 companies in the business. Their combined output was more than 207,000,000 pounds.

"And the manufacturers have beaten the silk worm at his own game," declared Miss Peterson. "They have learned to make thread containing almost four times as many filaments as that spun by the silk worm. This makes it possible to weave artificial silks that are more gossamer than the real ones."

After she had finished her survey of the rayon industry, Miss Peterson returned to the Textile Division.

"Rayon was only a stepchild then and was relegated to the last paragraph of the silk tariff schedule," she explained. "So, when I returned to the office I worked under the silk expert, Oscar B. Ryder. He's now a Tariff Commissioner."

When Mr. Ryder left the textile division in 1926, Miss Peterson became the Government's silk expert. The position demands she have a thorough knowledge of the part played in the economic scheme by silk and artificial silk; the amount of silk imported by the United States, the amount of artificial silk manufactured here.

She and Evelina K. Southworth, in charge of knit goods, are the only women experts in the textile division.

Export in the Senate.

"We didn't consider our situation the least bit peculiar until the Senate debate on the silk and rayon tariff schedule in 1930. Then we learned that while all the other textile experts were permitted to sit beside the different Senators who might need their help during the debate, we had to sit in the gallery because there was an unwritten rule against admitting women to the floor of the Senate.

"Senator Smoot said if I had any information to give, I should give it through the door," she smiled.

But before the debate was over she was invited to come down from the gallery and sit in the Chamber. Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, extended the invitation after making sure she would be admitted. He wanted her handy in case he needed some statistics when he took part in the debate.

"The Senators finally decided an expert is an expert and should be admitted to the chamber when information is needed, even when the expert happens to be a woman."

And so Ruth Peterson of the United States Tariff Commission was the first woman to speak on the floor of the Senate.

A Pamphlet Writer.

But most of her work calls for writing, not speaking. She writes voluminous pamphlets for the Tariff Commission; pamphlets liberally sprinkled with statistics. Those figures show, among other things, that the peak of silk imports by the United States was reached in 1929, when more than 87,000,000 pounds were bought at an average cost of almost $5 a pound.

Last year the imported silk amounted to 67,000,000 pounds at an average of $1.50 a pound. Although the bulk of our silk imports has always come from the Orient, some of the finest quality silks come from Europe, according to Miss Peterson.

"The finest silk upholstery fabrics, cravat silks and umbrella silks are from Italy," she said. France ranks second among European countries in the amount of silk imported to this country. But no matter whence it comes, there is no duty. Silk is on the free list.

"That's because we have no raw silk of our own," explained Miss Peterson. "But there's a substantial duty on rayon since we manufacture it ourselves."

The statistics that go into the Government pamphlets don't worry the silk expert. But sometimes it irks her because she must make all her reports extremely businesslike, full of dry, technical words.

"I'd like to put a little color into them," she smiled. "When I was at Cornell I majored in English as well as economics, and so my first pamphlets contained plenty of drama. I even managed to put some action into them. But it was all blue-penciled out. So now I write very precise, very correct ones. And while rayon seems a living, breathing Cinderella to me, you'd never dream it from reading one of my pamphlets about it."

Men Fall for Bargains As Easily as Women Do

Women aren't the only ones who buy things simply because they are bargains. When several hundred American tourists visited Halifax, N. S., a few days ago they bought out the city's entire stock of snow shoes. Halifax, enduring its hottest day of the season, was surprised. It had expected to do a big business in bathing suits. But the tourists, mostly men, stocked up on snow shoes because they were $5 cheaper there than at home.

Fewer Poets Sing of Hands; Reason for It

By Frances Mangum.

THERE'S news in hands these days. They have greater possibilities than they have ever had. It's true that fewer poets are singing of them, but there's a good reason for this.

In the days when versifiers launched their eloquence in quatrains and sonnets, lovely hands were rare enough to be sensational. But now that the manicure is one of the ABC's of beauty routine only ugly hands are conspicuous.

Never before have there been so many opportunities for changing commonplace hands into things of beauty. Never before has there been such opportunity for changing the color of the nails, the shape of the fingers, and even changing new hands for old.

Housework Won't Hurt.

The time is definitely past when a woman need despair over stubby fingers, stained nails, or tell-tale wrinkles. Her song of lament, "I can't have pretty hands. I do too much housework," is a tune of other days.

In the first place, modern conveniences have lifted housework out of the scrub and grub era. It's mostly a matter of pushing buttons and turning on electric currents. When it comes down to such toil as dusting or washing dishes there are gloves that protect the hands from soil and water, and keep them from burning rough and wrinkled. Some women say they can't work in gloves, but chances are they haven't tried. Gloves, like a number of things, are mainly a habit that has to be acquired. Try them for a week and then compare the saving in hands with lack of efficiency. Which is greater?

Nails Shape the Hands.

The shape of the hands now lies chiefly in the shape of the nails. Any good manicurist can take the curse off short, stubby hands by filing the nails to a tapering point. Exaggerated by pointed nails are off balance, but there's a happy medium.

Slender, tapering hands look well sometimes with long pointed nails. The in-between hand, neither long nor short, is best suited to nails slightly beyond the tip of the finger.

The typist who insists she can't have lovely hands because her nails break on the machine evidently hasn't tried the rubber tips which fit so easily over the fingers and save the nails from breaking and cracking.

One broken nail that mars a perfect ten can be easily remedied by a false nail. This glues on over the real nail, can be polished to match the natural nine, and filed off to match their shape.

PILLAR to POST

WHILE the city sleeps, Ernest K. Lindley, author and newspaperman, is turning out history hot off the griddle.

As the subjects of his books deal with the immediate past, he can not loaf along; often at the typewriter in his Wardman Park apartment he hears the clatter of milk trucks and late roisterers. He could work in the morning if he chose, as his newspaper job does not require his presence until noon, but he prefers to do his creative writing "when things have quieted down."

• • • •

In any household where there are small children, the mornings are usually noisy. Mr. Lindley has two sons, Johnathan, 3, and Christopher, 7 months old. The birth of Johnathan coincided with the publication of his first book, "Franklin D. Roosevelt—Career in Progressive Democracy." Christopher was born when "The Roosevelt Revolution" came off the press.

• • • •

His children and wife, the former Betty Van Deventer, are at their farm in Bucks County, Pa., for the summer, living in a stone house built in 1750. Mrs. Lindley, before her marriage conducted a radio advertising agency in New York.

• • • •

With the family away, Mr. Lindley continues to do his writings in the middle of the night, partly through habit and because, he says, with a smile, at night his critical sense is numbed. In an endeavor to keep abreast of the news he must write fast; Roosevelt Revolution" was written in seven weeks.

• • • •

When it was put in the hands of the publisher his wife thought he ought to celebrate and accordingly she arranged a theater party in New York. They went to see the Pulitzer prize play, "Men in White." So exhausted was Mr. Lindley he slept through all three acts of this grim and exciting drama.

Housekeepers.

Bobby, 16, and Dick, 14, sons of "Red" Smith and pretty blonde Louise, keep house by themselves in the family cottage on Lake Jackson. Their parents visit them occasionally on week-ends, and boast that they never tasted better beef stew than that cooked by the youngsters over a camp fire back of the log cabin.

• • • •

Bobby and Dick scorn the electric stove in the cabin and do all their cooking scout fashion, outside. Their mother admits they are not so neat about the way they keep house, and she spends a lot of time picking up and generally organizing things upon her visits there. They can't be bothered making beds and other such sissy things when there is so much canoeing, fishing and swimming to be done.

The Beret, Large and Floppy, Will Be the Smart Fall Hat

Pancake, 'Rembrandt,' 'Goya' Have Already Appeared in Shop Windows.

A wide variety of fashionable hats—from pancacke berets to sombreros—are described in the third of three features on new fall styles.

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP).—Despite the heat, designers are trying their most treasured fall hats on the heads of complacent models, atnd dripping investigators may learn what women will be wearing two months from now.

The large berets—pancake, Rembrandt, Goya, and so forth—have already made their appearance in shop windows. More of them are promised for fall—bigger, better, handsomer, and more varied berets.

Moreover, there are veils, reaching anywhere from the eyebrow to the chin. They are added with no thought of hiding the wearer's face, it was explained, but merely to "dress up" the hat.

Four-fifths of the autumn hats will be black, to accompany the black satin suits that are filling the shop windows now and are recommended for late summer and early fall. There will be a good bit of brown, and a taste of such other colors as tomato red, "oyster bisque," "puree of peas," "creme de cocoa" and a bright electric blue.

Dressmaker Touches.

Other news notes of the hat world are that hats will be more elegant, with more "dressmaker" touches. Double brims give the beret feeling even when the beret turns into a hat. Crowns will still be shallow, or perhaps shallower.

The designers also say a dress hat will be a dress hat and a sport hat something very different, though which is which may not always be apparent to the eyes of a layman.

Two young designers, Helen and Edward Liebert, have added a "Goya" collection to the foregoing. Among them is a big, Latin-quarter beret which they say represents "Goya's idea of what Rembrandt should have looked like."

It is made of brown felt with a visor front, fullness in the back and a pleated top. The designers intend it for casual wear.

Another model is a large beret of black velvet with a curled red peacock feather in the back. Though this is just as Latin quarter as the other, it is a formal hat.

Mexican Note.

A hat which its creators admit "lots of people can't wear and shouldn't try, is a huge picture affair of felt, with a sweeping brim. Underneath, in the back, is a bright velvet bow which appears to be perched in the wearer's hair. An eyebrow veil complete the devastating effect.

The Mexican note follows the influx of Mexican colors and motifs in spring and summer prints and shoes. One of these hats is a saucer-like sport hat of yachtsman blue felt, with a double brim that stays put in any number of Mexican poses. Upholstery cord trims the shallow crown.

Hatters' plush, velvet and felt are the chief materials of fall hats, the last named including velours in high colors. Hatter's plush, formerly the delight of dowagers in Queen Mary hats, is shaved as close as satin in one dressed-up hat with a largish, uneven brim, pancake crown and tassel in the front. In its natural state, hatters' plush forms a huge beret trimmed with clips which can be taken off and used if the wearer gets an unexpected flower.

Travelers will admire a collapsible black velvet pillbox with shirred crown which folds into a 6-inch square, but which is versatile enough to wear from morning to night, with formal or informal clothes.

A "pin felt" gleaming with actual pinheads—guaranteed not to come out—is another morning-to-night hat.

FERA Project Of Nurseries Will Keep Up

Schools So Successful to Be Continued Through the Year.

THE nursery schools established under the Federal Emergency Relief act last winter were so successful they will be continued through the coming year.

Twenty-four women from nearby States, who will teach in these schools this winter, are now taking a four weeks' training course at the National Child Research Center, 3209 Highland place.

Miss Doris Erwin, in charge of the summer training course, told yesterday of some of the aims of the FERA nursery schools. Miss Adelia Boynton, director of the research center, is now on vacation.

"The young women taking the course are unemployed teachers who have been trained to work with young children but who have never had any experience in nursery schools," Miss Erwin said.

"Hundreds of these teachers are taking courses in approved nursery school centers all over the country. Those attending this school are from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia."

"The purpose of the nursery schools is to provide care for children whose mothers are employed during the day, to give work to unemployed teachers, to create an environment that will show mothers and teachers the best way to train the preschool child, to aid the physical and mental development of the child."

When the nursery schools were first established, many persons opposed them, saying they were trying to teach children to be independent of their parents. At the time, Miss Boynton explained, this was not true.

"It is our wish to correlate home and school training. A large part of our work is parent education. Parents must realize the need of teaching their children to live on a regular schedule, and to develop personal and social habits that will aid in a healthy attitude toward life."

What Today Means

"Leo."

If July 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m., from 3:15 p. m. to 5:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

This July 28 being Saturday, only businesses catering to the public's personal needs and entertainment will find it profitable to operate. They should make money, and there will be possibly a good deal of cash spent. A wave of recklessness, both in automobile dirving and water sports, may be prevalent, so it is advisable to exercise a great deal of care during the next 48 hours. Foolhardiness in either pleasure must be avoided, if you do not wish to endanger yourself and others. If you will mix with others, a good time socially can be expected. Good-fellowship will be the dominant spirit presiding over friendly gatherings, and a better understanding of some of your friends' characters may be gained. Married, engaged couples and the sentimentally inclined will display good judgment if they exercise discretion by refraining from any kind of unfriendly or sarcastic criticism. Following this advice, quarrels may be avoided and an unpleasant week-end prevented.

If a woman and July 28 is your natal day, your artistic nature may make you rather temperamental, especially if you think others do not accord your ability the recognition it deserves. In time, you may discover it does not pay to be supersensitive in this respect. The right sort of husband might do much to help you solve some of your problems, providing, however, you do not allow your ambitions to interfere with your home life. It might be advisable not to discuss too freely your personal affairs with casual acquaintances, for your confidence may be abused. Within the next 24 hours, you may receive an agreeable surprise, so keep your ears alert for the door bell or telephone.

The child born on July 28, when it reaches its teens, will evince great interest in all that is beautiful, and in a very definite manner show its appreciation. This child can easily be encouraged or discouraged, so care must be exercised that cold water is never thrown on any display of enthusiasm it shows, regarding any subject in which it takes an interest. A training preparing it for a professional career might be advisable.

If a man and July 28 is your birthday, you probably lap up praise, as readily as a cat does cream, and find adverse criticism as bitter as quinine. If you cease being susceptible to the opinions of others, you will be happier and make greater progress. There is every reason for you to have a successful career and money.

Refuse Holder Makes Kitchen Life Bearable

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HALF the besetting sins of a kitchen vanish with the advent of a new garbage receptacle.

Hot kitchens are unpleasant at best, but when there's even a suggestion of stale garbage—as there is likely to be this weather—they're unbearable. And when they become the playground of flies—words fail.

The new receptacles aim straight at such troubles. By using one of these specially treated and leak-proof bags garbage becomes a simple matter. It can be tossed away after each meal in the sanitary container and placed in the main bearer.

Six of these bags come with a metal frame which holds them up. It's a matter of about two seconds to fasten them to the frame. Leave them on top of the sink or underneath, whichever is most convenient. This automatically eliminates the necessity of washing out a metal receptacle, an unpleasant task in itself.

Summer cottagers appreciate the convenience of these sanitary innovations. They will find their vacation far more of a pleasure (as far as the kitchen is concerned) if they will take a rack and several parcels of bags with them.

Ounce of Prevention.

The sink flusher gets right down to business. If one end of it is fastened to the faucet and the other end placed over the drain, a stream of water will go pouring through the hose and down the pipes, taking all excess matter with it.

It's a material proof that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, for if the sink flusher is used once a day or three or four times a week there never can be trouble with clogged-up drains.

By sending a stream of hot water down the pipes one melts away grease collecting there. The strength of the current also dislodges all small food particles.

Bathtub Head Rests.

Outside of climbing into the refrigerator and closing the door, about the best way to keep cool is via the bathtub.

A downtown store is doing all in its power to turn the tub into a place of luxury. They have recently reduced sponge head rests from 50 cents to a quarter. These fasten through a vacuum process on to the back of the tub and serve as pillows.

Makes Steaks Delectable.

A new steak broiler is guaranteed to turn out the best steaks ever. If one must have steaks in hot weather, here is a quick and easy way to prepare them.

The broiler is an open pan with holes in it, resting over another pan. As the meat broils the juice drops down in the bottom pan. As it cooks more the juice begins to steam over and around the steak, cooking its own flavor back into it. When it's done, put the steak on a platter and help keep it warm by pouring the warm juice over it.

Besides steaks, the broiler cooks liver, chops, fish, bacon and chicken in a royal way.

Knife Sets.

June brides who got everything there was to get in silver and linen, but somehow missed out on kitchenware will find the present a good time for picking up some fine reduced knife sets. One of them, formerly $2.50, but now $1.49, includes a paring knife and carving knife.

Another one, formerly $4 and now much less, consists of two large knives, a grapefruit knife, and a paring knife. The knives in both sets are stainless steel.

Marking Time.

The manager of a local food department explained they merely "marked time" during the summer, but when fall came they were going to introduce several lines new to Washington.

This in a whisper: They're likely to have some choice Mexican foods, canned chile, tamales and the like. And several kinds of candy made from famed recipes. And pastries—such pastries!

But for the present they are picking up good products at special prices and retailing them to the public for very little. In this category come three kinds of preserves, raspberry, strawberry and grape, all packed in 1 pound 13 ounce containers. They sell for 35 cents a piece, or 3 for $1.

Cocktail Mixers.

Some new cocktail mixers have a number of advantages over the old-timers. They are quite tall in the first place, taller than a highball glass. It's easy to put them down in a glass, shaker or pitcher and manipulate them all that's needed.

Besides beating up drinks they will serve the housewife well in whipping cream or beating eggs. They're only 20 cents.

Inspired by Pompeii's Last Days

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, July 27. — For a modern furniture style to be the result of a volcanic eruption may sound like a joke. But the fact is that one of the newest of today's styles—one that is growing more and more popular—is inspired by the furniture of those last days of Pompeii you've all read about.

We call it Classic Modern or Neo-classic. And even then, 1,855 years ago, it was Neo (or new) classic. Because it, in turn, was a modification of the old Classic Greek furniture.

It was Robert Adam, the eighteenth century designer, who was the first to adopt the original Pompeiian furniture into designs which England and France could use.

The forward curve of the chairs' front legs and the backward swing of the rear ones is another typical point to look for. So is the slight back roll of the chair backs.

In the columns which support the table and server, you can see a very definite Empire tinge taken from the classic Greek columns but freed of much of their ornamentation.

Velvet Cream With Blueberries Is This Week's Recipe Winner

Mrs. Netta B. Spencer Gets the $3 for First Award; Blueberry Butterscotch and a Fruit Salad Come in Second and Third.

By Susan Mills.

THE blueberry had better change its color, because it has been lauded and glorified by many housewives. This week's recipes have a great deal of merit, and it is hoped the prize-winners will be interesting and useful to you.

Because they are simple, new and refreshing, the recipes of Mrs. Netta B. Spencer, 2807 Connecticut avenue, apartment 401; Mrs. A. C. Lovgren, 2501 Foxall road, and Miss Agnes McNeilly, 330 Channing street northeast, have been selected. The prizes, $3, $2 and $1, are awarded in order of the names. Their recipes appear below:

Velvet Cream With Blueberries.

Dissolve ½ box of gelatine in a gill of water, add to it ½ pint of light sherry, grated lemon peel, the juice of 1 lemon and 1 cup of sugar. Stir over the fire until the sugar is thoroughly dissolved, strain and cool. Before it sets beat into it a pint of cream.

Half fill small molds with washed fresh blueberries, pour the mixture on top and place in the refrigerator until wanted.

Blueberry Butterscotch.

3 cups blueberries
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup butter
1 cup flour (scant)

Fill glass pieplate with berries. Rub sugar, butter and flour together into crumbs; spread over berries; bake in moderate oven until berries are juicy and top golden brown.

Fruit Salad.

2 tablespoonfuls French dressing
2 cups melon balls (any kind)
1 cup diced pineapple
2 oranges, peeled and diced
1 cup blueberries, washed and drained
½ cup mayonnaise
5 tablespoonfuls whipping cream

Shred, wash and drain lettuce. Toss with French dressing. Toss the fruit together with the mayonnaise, to which whipped cream has been added. Pile on the bed of lettuce.

The honorable mentions are Mrs. Ella R. Beck, Miss Mary Talbert and Miss Mary E. Moran. Miss Kay Smith suggests that crushed fresh or stewed blueberries added to lemonade make a refreshing drink.

Juicy Tomato Good Company In Mixed Dish

By Ann Barrett.

SOMETHING with tomatoes in it—that's what sets up singing Bing Crosby (and many others, too). Above all (Bing says), a kind of highly seasoned goulash, in which the tomato has a big supporting cast of eggs, ham, garlic, parsley and cream.

In case you're one of the many who favor such concoctions, here's the full story: First peel and quarter 4 large, ripe tomatoes, and sprinkle them with ¼ teaspoon salt. Then mash 1 section of garlic in a bowl, and add 3 tablespoons olive oil (or any cooking oil).

Dip the quartered tomatoes into this oil, then put them on a plate. Put remaining oil and garlic into skillet and heat slowly (so as not to burn garlic). Then cook the tomatoes gently about three minutes, and remove the solid parts to a plate. Next, beat up 6 eggs with fork just till whites and yokes are blended.

Add ½ cup top milk or thin cream, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¾ cup chopped, cooked ham, 2 tablespoons minced parsley. Cook over a moderate fire (in same pan tomatoes were cooked), stirring till eggs are set. Serve egg mixture on toast, garnished with tomatoes.

Baked Eggs in Tomatoes.

Another slick egg and tomato dish (that isn't quite so mixed up) is baked eggs in tomatoes, done this way: Cut a slice off stem ends of 4 large, firm tomatoes; and scoop out pulp, leaving a shell. Then heat 3 tablespoons butter in heavy skillet, set tomatoes in (hollow side up) and cook till they begin to brown (about 3 minutes). Next, break 1 egg into each tomato.

Sprinkle these eggs with ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 4 tablespoons grated cheese and 1 teaspoon minced chive or onion. Then put the skillet into a moderate oven (350 F.) and bake till eggs are set. (about 8 minutes). Serve on rounds of buttered toast.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Summer Diet.

Few of us realize that food may add to our hot weather burdens. A certain amount of food must be burned by the body in order to maintain normal temperature. However, during heat waves the temperature of the air may be much higher than the normal temperature of the body. In such a situation it is obvious that food not needed for the purpose of maintaining body heat and the oxidation (burning) of foods beyond the amount needed for energy, means that the body must rid itself of the excess heat. This is why people seek to place themselves in cool surroundings, bathe more frequently, prefer iced drinks and cold foods, or seek a cooler climate.

The first rule, then, in excessively hot weather is to eat less than is needed for the maintenance of bodily functions, unless the individual has ample opportunity for cooling the body at frequent intervals. The character of summer foods needs to be modified but little.

It should be noted that iced drinks cool the body less efficiently than cool drinks. The secondary reaction of iced drinks is to cause a marked congestion of the mucous membrane of the stomach, with an engorgement of the parts with blood. This has a tendency to increase, rather than decrease oxidation. Very hot drinks produce the same effect, but more quickly. Hence, the second rule in summer diet should be to avoid taking into the stomach iced as well as very hot fluids. If iced drinks must be taken they should be sipped slowly and each mouthful held long enough to so modify the temperature that when the fluid reaches the stomach congestion will not result. Many observers believe that the congestion of the mucous membrane of the stomach due to very hot or very cold drinks plays a positive role in the origin of peptic ulcers.

Summer is the time to give the digestive function of the body a real rest. A person of normal weight can usually afford to lose a few pounds during the hot months. Then, too, more fresh air and more out of doors will help pile up a reserve against winter infections of all sorts. We may become overheated unavoidably on certain hot days; we at least can refrain from overheating ourselves by adding food fuel when no fuel is needed.

ESCAPE from the SOVIETS

By TATIANA TCHERNAVIN

Released from prison after months of suffering, Tatiana Tchernavin, with her son, visited her husband in exile in Kem. They planned that she should return there in the summer and they would attempt to escape. In today's instalment of this fact story, mother and son are on their way to Kem.

MY little boy was in the best of spirits, chattered and sang; he knew quite as many songs as the students.

Traveling in this fashion we arrived at the station where my husband was to meet us, as he said in his letter. We came out of the train, but could not see him anywhere. Could I have misunderstood him?

My husband was standing at the end of the train; he was obviously feeling very nervous. An OGPU official was standing between him and us.

What can it mean? I wondered. Hasn't he got the permit for our visit, or isn't he supposed to be at the station?

"What's the matter with you?" I asked him almost before greeting him.

"Oh, it's nothing. I damaged my back a little. I had to lift a wet net weighing about three hundredweight. I slipped and fell on the hillside. When they lifted the net off my back I couldn't walk and had to crawl to my bunk."

"When did it happen?" I asked, scrutinizing him anxiously.

"Two or three days ago. I am up for the first time today. I haven't been able to lift my head. But I am much better today.

He Rowed Weakly.

"But everything has turned out splendidly. I have received permission for your visit and we have ten days for ourselves. I have hired a room for you with some peasants here, right by the sea. I am just going to take you there."

He brought us to a boat and sat down to the oars. He rowed with difficulty and beads of perspiration came out on his face.

But when I produced the remainder of the provisions we had for the journey he put down his oars and we all began eating as on a picnic.

Free at Night.

He brought us to a peasant cottage. It was much poorer than the one at Kem. There were no shining copper mugs and pans, no down pillows. The old man slept in the attic and the old woman and the grandchildren—their mother was dead—on the floor in the kitchen.

Every morning my husband went to do his work and did not come back to us till the evening. All day long he was watched by the OGPU escort and by his fellow prisoners, who might give him away any moment if they noticed anything suspicious. But at night we were free and could go from the cottage to the neighboring forest. There was a clearing there made by a forest fire. One could see a long way from there and could not be overheard.

Plans Outlined.

"We'll soon be out of this," my husband said. "We must choose a day when I am not supposed to go to work. Then it will be a good 20 hours before I am missed."

"You know, I still don't understand how it is that we've been allowed to come and see you here."

"Ah, it was my marine zoology that did the trick!" my husband laughed. "You remember what it was like at Kem? Sentries all over the place, 200 miles to the frontier, swamps all round and, besides, one would be missed within a few hours. OGPU knows very well that no one can escape from there, especially with a family. It took some planning to get away from the camp. . . . First of all, I had to convince them that I did not mean to escape and at the same time to invent all sorts of reasons for being sent to different places. I invented a new way of killing salmon and a year ago they sent me to teach it to the fishermen. Salmon is exported to England and I earned them a good many English pounds by that.

"Another time they sent me to investigate all their fisheries and my report was of such practical as well as scientific value that even they could not fail to see it. It never occurred to them, of course, that at the same time I looked out a suitable place for our escape. As a reward I was allowed to see you at Kem, but after that was again shut up behind barbed wire all the winter. In the spring I was transferred to Soroka and that was worse than ever. I nearly went mad there. Then I made a discovery which in any other country would have made me a rich man. I found a way of utilizing stickleback. It's a fish about 9 centimeters long, with bristles on its back, on its belly, on the front fins. It's a voracious little creature and devours other fishes' spawn and is a nuisance, too, because it gets in between the meshes of the net.

Discovery Helped.

"Well, I made an experiment—with nothing but a primus and a saucepan at my disposal—and obtained from it good oil and fish-meal admirably suited for fodder. Considering our acute shortage of fats and of fodder, it really was an important discovery. And this is what saved us. I have been sent to this place because the best catches of stickleback are here and, as a reward, was allowed to see you on the spot so that I need not interrupt my work. The chief of the camp himself signed my pass, convinced that I have put untold riches into their hands It's perfectly true that if they follow it up, the results will be of enormous value to the country. I have paid them liberally for my ten days without armed escort at my back all the time. But I am not going to work for them any more. Now we must escape—there won't be another such opportunity."

It had rained the whole day before but toward evening the wind changed and the sky cleared. The villagers were preparing to go fishing or haymaking at dawn.

"If we don't get off tomorrow, all is lost," said my husband. "In another two days your permit expires and you will have to go home. I'll never get sent to a place as good as this again."

"Very well, let us set off tomorrow."

"I'll go to our headquarters today and give in a report of my work—they like that—and also remind them that tomorrow is my off-day. Then they won't miss me till the day after."

When he went away, taking the boy with him, I looked for the tenth time over our things. I simply could not get the most essential ones packed into three knapsacks. Sugar and bacon took up a lot of room, and we had to take some rice and a few rusks as well. And we had to have a change of underclothes and something warm, too.

Everything Sorted.

Late in the evening when the boy was asleep my husband and I sorted everything out for the last time.

"We must have a change of leg-wrappers for each one of us." I tore up two sheets for the purpose—and our knapsacks grew still more bulky.

"Have you waterproof bags for matches, salt and sugar?"

I sat down to make them there and then, pricking my fingers—I was never any good at sewing.

We went on packing and repacking till late at night. I grew quite dizzy, and my husband's back began to ache, so we had to go to bed without finishing our job.

I could not go to sleep till daybreak and then it was time to get up. The boy ran to wash himself at the bay.

"We must make haste and finish packing," my husband hurried me. "When shall we tell the boy?"

Dress Too Noticeable.

"On the way."

We sat down to breakfast but were too excited to eat.

When we had finished and the boy had gone to get the boat ready, my husband stopped me:

"We can't leave the place so untidy—it gives the show away."

We washed up and tidied the room. We kept getting in each other's way, unable to master our agitation.

"How much longer will you be?" said the boy coming in. "All the villagers have gone. Shall I take the sail, daddy?"

"Yes, do. We are just coming. Take this knapsack. Is it heavy?"

"No. Not if I don't have to carry it far."

Riegel Crushes Peacock for Mid-Atlantic Golf Title, 4 and 2

Shute Trims Al Houghton, 6 and 5; Wood, Runyan, Kunes Also Win

Youngster's Long Putts Margin

Reaches Turn 5 Up and Holds on to His Lead Despite Rally.

Also Defeats Harper; Peacock Eliminates Maury Nee.

CASCADES CLUB, Hot Springs, Va., July 27 (AP).—Robert F. (Bobby) Riegel, youthful and brilliant golfer from the Hermitage Club, of Richmond, today won the Middle Atlantic golf championship, turning back both the Virginia and Maryland amateur champions in one day to take the coveted crown.

Victor over Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Virginia title holder, 1 up, in 20 holes in a thrilling semi-final match this morning, Bobby piled up a lead of five holes on Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring Club, Washington, on the outgoing nine this afternoon and closed out the match on the sixteenth green to win, 4 and 2.

Praises His Putter.

"The old putter did it," said the new champion, as the galleries rushed up to congratulate him. He held up the dilapidated club in which a huge splinter had been torn some time in the distant past. During the day it had dropped in many long putts, including a 20-footer on the curving nineteenth green, which saved a defeat in the semifinal match.

Riegel played fine golf to win the championship, but it was his putter more than anything else which brought him victory.

The new champion faltered on the incoming nine in both matches today, and in the morning especially had to fight gamely to pull his chestnuts from the fire.

Loses Early Leads.

He was three up on Harper at the turn, and all square at the eighteenth. This afternoon he was five up on Peacock through the eleventh, and just two up as they stood on the fifteenth tee.

A 20-foot putt gave Riegel the fifteenth, and he won without difficulty on the sixteenth green when Peacock drove into the rough, hit a tree with his second, put his third into a trap and failed to reach the green with his fourth.

A driving rain, whipped up the valley by a strong wind, caught Riegel and Peacock on the fifth hole and Bobby went one over par by missing a putt of three feet through water. Roger won the hole with par, using a No. 3 iron to putt. Secretary Walter McCallum called a halt until the rain moderated and they sat under a shelter for a half hour.

Misses Second 35.

Except for this missed putt in a quarter inch of water, Riegel would have had another par 35 out, duplicating his morning card.

After the shower, Riegel proceeded to take three of the next four holes from Peacock to make the turn 5 up. Peacock, usually a good putter, just couldn't get them down this afternoon.

They halved the tenth, with Bobby having one of his few three-putt greens, and there was another half at the eleventh when neither reached the green from the tee. Here Roger rallied and made three straight pars, while Bobby, driving into the rough on the twelfth, a water hazard on the thirteenth and a trap on the fourteenth, went 5 strokes over par.

Crowd Braves Rain.

Bobby's 20-foot putt for a par, after pitching from the rough over a trap on the fifteenth, practically decided the match. Peacock three-putted from 75 feet across a rolling green. A big gallery, braving the still-falling rain, accompanied them to the deciding green far down the cascades stream from the clubhouse.

Bobby, who is just 18, is a star of the University of Richmond golf team. He has been a threat in Virginia golf for several years and advanced to the semifinals in the Virginia amateur this summer, to be eliminated 1 up in 19 holes.

He is considering entering competition at Baltimore shortly in the

Giants Coast To 6-3 Win Over Phils

Schumacher Holds Rivals Safe; N. Y. Gains on Cards and Cubs.

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP).—The Giants found the seventh-place Phillies a team of "breather" opponents today after yesterday's pair of bitter battles with the Cardinals and scored an easy 6-to-3 victory behind Hal Schumacher.

The victory, while the second-place Cubs were idle and the Cardinals lost to Pittsburgh, enabled the league leaders to increase their margin to three full games over Chicago and five over St. Louis.

The Giants handed Schumacher a big lead when they blasted Roy (Snipe) Hansen for all their runs in the second and third innings, and the big right hander breezed through on a seven-hit hurling job. It was his fifteenth victory of the season against five defeats.

Giants Climb Hansen.

Hansen's troubles started after two were out in the second and didn't let up until he was out of the game. Mel Ott opened the innning with a single. After the next two men had been retired, Blondy Ryan smacked a single that advanced Ott to third, and Gus Mancuso drove in the first run with a high-bounding single that he barely beat to first. Schumacher helped himself along with a base hit that scored Ryan and when George Davis, in center field, let the ball go through him, Mancuso also tallied and Schumacher reached third. Joe Moore wound up the rally with a double that brought the pitcher home.

Schumacher Yields Run.

After getting only there hits in the first five frames, the Phils finally solved Schumacher for a run in the sixth, when Dick Bartell singled and completed the circuit on two infield outs with a wild pitch sandwiched between. The other two Philly runs resulted from Johnny Moore's tenth homer of the year, which followed a single by Lou Chiozza and a force play in the eighth.

Hornsby Sued For Divorce

Wife Charges Indignities; Asks Alimony, Child.

ST. LOUIS, July 27 (AP).—Rogers Hornsby, manager of the St. Louis Browns, today was sued for divorce at Clayton by Mrs. Mary Jeanette Hornsby, his second wife.

She alleged indignities and asserted Hornsby has an ungovernable temper, is jealous and "criticized, nagged, fretted and heckled" the plaintiff.

Mrs. Hornsby asks for alimony and custody of their son, Willis M. Hornsby's name was mentioned in connection with his present wife in May, 1923, when John A. Hine, the first husband of the present Mrs. Hornsby, filed suit to have their divorce set aside.

Hornsby's first wife had left him two months before and gone to the home of her parents in Chicago. After Hine, an automobile salesman, brought Hornsby's name into the case, the first Mrs. Hornsby returned to St. Louis and filed suit for divorce.

Reds' Offer of Players For Dressen Declined

Nashville, Tenn., July 27 (AP).—A proposition made by the Cincinnati Reds to swap a group of players to Nashville's Southern Association Club for Manager Charley Dressen was rejected today by the Vol management, Jimmy Hamilton, business manager, said, adding that "everything looks like the deal is off."

Nashville yesterday told Cincinnati officials they could have Dressen for $12,500. Hamilton, in declaring that the Reds' counter-offer of a player swap had been turned down, said that the cash sale proposition still stood. But he held little hope of its going through now.

Bell Wins Title, Downs Grant In 5 Sets

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 27 (AP).—Thanks to his terrific service, Berkeley Bell, of New York, is Seabright singles chanmpion for 1934. In a five-set final today he defeated Bryan M. Grant, of Atlanta, National clay court titleholder, 5—7, 6—1, 6—3, 2—6, 6—4.

Three times in the first set, after leading 40-0 or 40-15, he lost long deuce games and in the fourth set his errors let Grant run up a 4-0 lead. His backhand was weak.

Nor could the Southern midget claim any medals on the general brand of tennis he exhibited.

Plays Is Spotty.

Outside his first spurt, taking five of the last six games to win the first set, and allowing Bell only two games in the fourth, his execution was spotty.

Grant won in one respect. He fell ten times to five sprawls taken by Bell.

The final in the women's doubles saw Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Calif., and Elizabeth Ryan, London, England, triumph over Mrs. John W. Van Ryn, Philadelphia, and Josephine Cruickshank, Santa Ana, Calif., 7—5, 6—3.

Miss Jacobs meets Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, in the women's singles final at 3 p. m. tomorrow. The men's doubles finals is set for 4 o'clock. Wilmer Allison, Austin, Tex., and John W. Van Ryn, Philadelphia, oppose Bell and Gregory S. Mangin, Newark, N. J.

Mitchell, Welsh Tennis Winners

Barney Welsh and Dooley Mitchell, the two top-seeded players in the annual Public Parks tennis championships, thrilled a good-sized gallery yesterday at the Rock Creek courts by winning their semifinal matches from Ralph McElvenny and Bud Markey, respectively, after facing what appeared to be sure defeat. Welsh defeated hard-hitting Ralph, 6—1, 4—6, 6—4, and Mitchell beat Markey, 3—6, 7—5, 7—5.

Cronin Back, Depressed And Sober

Declares Gill and Berg Will Go; Cecil Travis Needs a Rest.

Unable to Solve Mound Ills; Picks Yankees to Take Flag.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

RECOVERED from the heat, but not from the humility of his bedraggled Nats' sorrowful Western trip, Manager Joe Cronin yesterday was as chipper as a lark denuded of its vocal chords. In the stead of the fire-eating boy manager of 1933 was a sober, slightly-wearied young man ready to philosophize on the vagaries of life.

He's still trying to catch his breath from the complete collapse of the Nats. It was all so sudden, he said, that he didn't quite know what to make of it except that "life is like that." It's the first time he's been with a second-division outfit since 1929 and adversity doesn't come easy to Cronin who, unlike the late Gen. Washington who lost his first command, never learned to accept defeat early in his career.

Drastic Changes Hinted.

Cronin was in the mood to let drop hints of drastic changes that, in gayer times, he would not confide even to himself. He didn't know exactly what he'd do with the Nats, he said, but Johnny Gill's continued presence in the Washington outfield is doomed; Moe Berg will soon be getting his unconditional release; Travis needs a long rest. As far as his pitching is concerned, he's up against it. That's what one gleaned from the tenor of Cronin's talk yesterday.

Inadvertantly, in the midst of his soliloquy, Cronin let fall, "Well, I guess we'll have to put the season in," for which remarks he probably will be called promptly on the carpet by Owner Clark Griffith, who concedes no pennant until the Bureau of Standards certified for him the mathematical certainty that the Nats are out of the race.

None In Sight.

"There aren't any players in sight," said Cronin, "and when the limit is off on September 15, there's darn few we can call in. Only Ed Chapman and Ray Prim, who aren't going so hot, and a young outfielder from Chattanooga named Marion. Albany still thinks it's in the pennant race and it would cost us plenty to get Outfielders Powell and Sington right now.

"But that's the way it goes with a losing team. Everything happens for the worst. Out West, any time our pitcher would walk a man, it would be another run. Every time we booted the ball, a run would come in. The opposition could boot 'em all over the lot and we couldn't score.

"Poor Cecil Travis need a rest but West, and what happened? Bluege goes down with the heat, and when he recivers we have to use him in the outfield. We have a catcher playing first base and only one regular in the outfield and Travis so tired he can hardly stand up, what with the heat and everything.

Need Infielders.

"That's the way it goes all right. Look at the last few years. The only utility infielder we had a few seasons back was Jackie Hayes and he never got a chance to play. Last year, Johnny Kerr was our only infield reserve and we didn't have an injury. This year, with Bluege and Kress available, we are still needing infielders.

"I can't figure our pitchers out. There's nothing wrong physically with any of 'em. I thought they'd snap out of it, but it's been the same old story. They go out there and get their ears pinned back almost every time they start. And that's the same pitching staff that burned up the league last year. It's beyond me. The team's still hustling, but we can't win."

Cronin hasn't tumbled into the Detroit band wagon yet. He thinks the Yankees are going to win the pennant. If the Tigers couldn't shake the Yanks off while the New York club was out West, then Joe looks for the Yankees to draw out to a wide lead ta home, where they are a tough club to beat. He wouldn't be surprised to see the Red Sox finish second.

Managerial-Tangle Results In Rosenbloom-Olin Probe

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP).—The New York State Athletic Commission today ordered an investigation of a report that Maxie Rosenbloom's manager acted as a second to Bob Olin in a recent fight at Hollywood, Calif., and indicated that if there were any suspicious circumsances sanction for a proproposed light-heavyweight title match between the two would be withdrawn.

Rosenblum, ruler of the 175 pounders, and Olin had been matched for a title scrap in the Madison Square Garden Bowl, August 6. The California commission has wired New York that Frank Bachman, Rosenbloom's manager, was in Olin's corner in a fight against Abe Feldman there last Friday. The fight was declared a draw, but Jackie Fields, former welterweight titleholder who acted as referee and made the decision, was suspended by the California commission for his action. Newspapermen and ringside specators were almost unanimous in believing Feldman had won.

If Olin is disqualified as a challenger, the commission indicated the title shot would be given to Joe Knight, Southern aspirant.

By Gayle Talbot.

LONDON, July 27 (AP).—The fightingest set of Davis Cup players to represent the United States in many a year squares off against England tomorrow in the challenge round, conceded an even chance of carrying the big cup back to America.

While there was no trace of over-confidence in the American camp as the players engaged in a final tune-up, there was an air of cheerful determination either to win or convince the defending team it had been in a whale of a fight.

Vie in Key Match.

Frank Shields, who clashes with Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin in the opener, which many critics regard as the key match, reflected the team's attitude when he said:

"I don't know whether I'll win, but I'll promise one thing. I won't choke up and I won't quit pouring everything I have on every ball."

Sidney B. Wood, jr., the other American singles player, meets Fred Perry, ace of the English team, in the second match. Although he isn't particularly confident as to his chances, he said he thinks America "is an even bet to win the cup."

"Frank's hitting them better than I ever saw him," Wood said, after a hard workout with Shields.

Calls Victory Luck.

Perry, who was dressing across the aisle, overheard the remark and called over to Wood:

"Say, you fellows were shot with luck even beating Australia."

George M. Lott, jr., apparently confident that he and Lester Stofen can win the doubles without further practice, did not work out, but Stofen played five hard sets against R. S. Ramillon, the French professional. The Frenchman won them all.

There is a possibility the matches may have to be continued beyond the three days allotted—Saturday, Monday and Tuesday—as Capt. R. Morris (Dick) Williams, of the American side, and H. Roper Barrett, for England, agreed to play not later than 6:45 p. m. (12:45 p. m., Eastern standard time) if the sun is shining. At that hour it becomes very bothersome to the player on the side facing the west.

Cards Blanked, 4-0, by Pirates

Swift Wins in Duel With Haines, Gives 7 Hits.

Pittsburgh, July 27 (AP).—Bill Swift held the flag-hunting Cardinals to seven hits today to give the Pirates their second shutout in two days, 4 to 0.

After six scoreless frames of a duel between Swift and Jess Haines, the Bucs solved the St. Louis veteran for three runs in the seventh when Gus Suhr broke the spell with a triple. Manager Pie Traynor came through with a hot single for the first run. Tommy Thevenow and Earl Grace followed with base hits and Thevenow scored the third tally on Swift's fly.

Only one runnr got as far as second against Swift, and none reached third. He struck out seven and didn't grant a pass.

Quantico Juniors Bow.

Norfolk, Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Staging an uphill fight, the Quantico American Legion Juniors found the opposition too strong here this afternoon, losing to the Newport News Legion Club, 2 to 0. This defeat automatically eliminated the Quantico boys, as the affair here is a round robin tournament, teams losing being shunted from play-off finals.

Tri-City Races Under Way Today

More Than 100 Fast Boats Will Vie in Two-Day Competition.

THE bark of the starting gun at 2:30 this afternoon will be the signal for angry purrs from a bevy of outboard motors that will inaugurate the greatest outdoor aquatic show ever held on the immediate tributaries of Chesapeake Bay—this year's bigger and better Tri-City Regatta at Herald Harbor, with more than 100 of the country's fastest boats going into action for two days.

So great is the interest and so large is the entry list for these events that Charles F. Chapman, secretary of the American Power Boat Association Racing Commission, will be on hand, collaborating with L. Gordon Leech, who is in charge of the race program, in directing the show.

Sam Crooks, of Rumson, N. J., the high-point winner for outboards in 1933, will head the list of famed jockeys of the skittish water steeds competing in the regatta. He will pilot his Dragon 46 in several events on both days. Fred Jacoby, of North Bergen, N. J.; Maryland Codd, Towson, Md.; J. Elmer Stagner, Baltimore, and Joe Thorne, New Rochelle, N. Y., also are expected to figure prominently in the competition.

Dale to Compete.

Roy Dale, of the U. S. Department of Commerce Bureau of Navigation, who has been a boating enthusiast for many years, will be among those representing the Capital in the fast going. In his second year of competitive racing, Dale has built a new boat, the Guppy, in the 125 cubic inch displacement class with which he hopes to add to honors garnered last year. Last week he Guppy gave him second place in a race against a field that included S. Mortimer Auerbach, of Atlantic City and Chicago, holder of the world's record in this classification. He will meet Auerbach's Emancipator II again today and tomorrow in the Tri-City Regatta, as well as the Howdy II, driven by H. Y. Haffner, of Severna Park, Md.

Dale also will enter his 225 cubic inch racer Ketchme in the Tri-City events in an effort to clinch the Curtiss Trophy, which he won last year and which requires a second win for permanent possession. Dale will face keen competition in this class, including Rex Boys, driven by C. P. Reckner, Severna Park, Md., and Chotsie IV, driven by Mrs. Florence Burnham, of Wilmington, Del.

Tabulates Results.

In order to make it possible for all professional outboards to compete fairly, Commodore T. S. Y. Tyson, of Philadelphia, an A. P. B. A. racing official, is completing a tabulation of the results of all outboard races this year to arrive at a basis for equitable handicapping of entries in the various classes. This new arrangement is expected to insure a full entry list for all events and heats without the usual dropping out of entries whose showings in the first heat are discouraging.

As a close to the first day's schedule of events, a round of entertainment has been planned. Bob Godwin, light-heavyweight boxing contender, will stage a special exhibition match; there will be evening band concerts, vaudeville acts and dancing to regale the pilots, mechanics, owners and spectators.

Runyan Conquers Metz by 1 Up After Ball Is Halted by Fan.

PARK CLUB, Buffalo, N. Y., July 27 (AP).—Craig Wood, of Hollywood, N. J., and Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, who met in a play-off for the 1933 British Open Crown, with Shute triumphing, won their quarter-final matches today and will meet tomorrow in one of the two semifinals for the professional golfers championship.

Wood, the belting blond Adonis, registered a notable 2-and-1 victory over Al Watrous, the squint-eyed Detroit veteran, who conquered Champion Gene Sarazen yesterday. The sharp-shooting Shute shattered par for the third straight day in eliminating Al Houghton, of Washington, D. C., who as a youngster, once caddied for President Wilson. Shute won, 6 and 5.

Runyan Beats Metz.

The other semifinalists are Paul Runyan, 26-year-old White Plains, N. Y., star, who nosed out young Dick Metz, of Chicago, 1 up, on the thirty-sixth green, and Gene Kunes, an unknown from Norristown, Pa. Kunes took over Bob Crowley, of Dedham, Mass., the qualifying medalist, 4 and 3.

Shute won much as he pleased from Houghton. The prematurely bald Philadelphian, who is 29, shaved 7 strokes off par for the 31 holes of the match. It gave him a record of 28 under par for 98 holes of match play.

They both missed their tries for birdies on the second, Shute from 10 feet and Houghton from 12, and halved it with 5s, remaining all even. Houghton canned a 15-foot putt for a birdie 3 at the third to go 1 up.

Shute Gets Birdies.

Shute dealt out bitter medicine to Houghton as they started the second nine. Denny rapped in a 10-footer for a birdie 2 at the tenth and bagged consecutive birdies at the eleventh and twelfth to go 2 up. On the latter hole his 30-foot putt for an eagle 3 stopped an inch short of the cup.

Shute and Houghton halved the next three holes in par figures and went to the sixteenth, with Denny leading 2 up. On the fifteenth Houghton overran the green with his second, but his chip shot rimmed the cup and stopped on the edge, laying Shute a stymie.

Denny added the sixteenth to his advantage after Houghton's second was trapped and he exploded feebly. They halved the seventeenth, and Shute went 4 up on the home hole, where Houghton poked his iron second into the tall grass behind the green and failed to get out the first time, losing the hole to Wood's 4.

Remains 4 Up.

Shute and Houghton started the afternoon round by matching stroke for stroke for the first four holes, the former British open king staying 4 up on his Washington rival.

Shute became 5 up on Houghton, winning the short twenty-third with a regulation 3, when Al's

Jaz Age Runs 1½ Lengths In Rear

Victor Takes Command at Head of Stretch, Increases Lead.

Blue Foam, Favorite, Is Third; Seven Horses in Feature.

SALEM, N. H., July 27 (AP).—O. L. Foster's Pass, a consistent 3-year-old plater, today raced to his second straight victory in three starts at Rockingham Park as he whipped six other claimers in a 6-furlong dash, which served as the feature.

Away from the post with the first division, the son of Chance Shot was held back off the early pace by C. E. Allen and then sent into command at the head of the stretch. From a neck margin he increased his advantage over C. E. Pariseau's Jazz Age to 1½ length at the finish. J. D. Mikel's Blue Foam, the lukewarm choice, lost the place by 3 lengths.

Pass was the second choice, returning $7.40 for $2 after running the distance in 1:14 over a slow track.

REIGH ROSE, within striking distance of the pace from the start, moved up stoutly after leaving the back stretch, wore down LADY BUCK at the furlong pole and, kept under urging, drew out at the end. HAPPY SURPRISE, prominently placed from the beginning, saved ground on the final turn, and held on gamely under punishment. LADY BUCK established the early pace, but faltered through the stretch. SUN CLOISTER held on with good courage in the drive. SILVER WRACK went evenly. SECULAR never was able to enter into contention. IMMUNE, shuffled back in the opening furlong, met with sharp interference when starting to move up rounding the far turn. She was going strongly at the end when too late.

COLOR BEARER worked his way forward gradually, wore down the leaders in the stretch and, under urging, held WAX safe. The latter moved up stoutly midway of the turn and held on gamely, under punishment. MAD BULL, closed a big gap in the last quarter mile. LAST SERVANT, away well and well up in the first sixteenth, was knocked back to last place before the opening furlong was completed. He closed stoutly in the last furlong, and would no doubt have been a stern factor with good racing luck. COLORIST moved up around the turn, came wide into the stretch, and was unable to improve his position thereafter. SUNDROPS had good speed for the first three furlongs, but weakened badly in the last quarter mile. TUTTICURIO weakened after a display of early speed.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:37. Winner, A. Bartelstein's b. c. (4), by John P. Grier—Hiker. Trained by H. Unna. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:07 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLUMAGE, $5.20, $2.80, $2.20; MANAGER BILL, $3.30, $2.40; PARTIES, $2.20.

PLUMAGE, away well and under slight restraint for the first half mile, went to the front approaching the far turn and, drawing into a good lead, increased her advantage all through the closing stretch run. MANAGER BILL, prominently placed from the start, continued determinedly through the stretch, but was no match for the winner. PARTIES, restrained early, made up ground when called upon. SARSITA dropped back badly in the opening sixteenth, moved up slightly in run down the back stretch, but was never able to reach a prominent position.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REIGH ROSE, $4.20, $2.90, $2.50; HAPPY SURPRISE, $4.90, $3.80; LADY BUCK, $3.40.

REIGH ROSE, within striking distance of the pace from the start, moved up stoutly after leaving the back stretch, wore down LADY BUCK at the furlong pole and, kept under urging, drew out at the end. HAPPY SURPRISE, prominently placed from the beginning, saved ground on the final turn, and held on gamely under punishment. LADY BUCK established the early pace, but faltered through the stretch. SUN CLOISTER held on with good courage in the drive. SILVER WRACK went evenly. SECULAR never was able to enter into contention. IMMUNE, shuffled back in the opening furlong, met with sharp interference when starting to move up rounding the far turn. She was going strongly at the end when too late.

SECOND RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:04. Off at 3:07. Winner, Riley & Meeker's ch. g. (2), by High Time—Pinkie. Trained by A. Meeker. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:01 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLOR BEARER, $8.10, $3.20, $2.70; WAX, $2.80, $2.40; MAD BULL, $3.30.

COLOR BEARER worked his way forward gradually, wore down the leaders in the stretch and, under urging, held WAX safe. The latter moved up stoutly midway of the turn and held on gamely, under punishment. MAD BULL, closed a big gap in the last quarter mile. LAST SERVANT, away well and well up in the first sixteenth, was knocked back to last place before the opening furlong was completed. He closed stoutly in the last furlong, and would no doubt have been a stern factor with good racing luck. COLORIST moved up around the turn, came wide into the stretch, and was unable to improve his position thereafter. SUNDROPS had good speed for the first three furlongs, but weakened badly in the last quarter mile. TUTTICURIO weakened after a display of early speed.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:37. Winner, A. Bartelstein's b. c. Stocks Regain Part of Loss; Market Firms

New York, July 27 (AP).—Except for a few weak spots, the stock market was on firmer ground today and recovered part of its losses on the wide decline in the preceding session.

Cooler weather and rains in the West removed emphasis from drought losses, although the plight of the farmer still caused a good deal of misgivings over autumn business prospects.

Break in Gas.

A sharp break in Consolidated Gas brought some nervousness and led to another flurry of selling in the afternoon, eliminating part of the gains on a vigorous early rebound. The selling wave was short-lived and the market firmed again before the finish.

Many rails and industrials that were hard hit on the decline regained 1 or 5 points of their losses.

Trading declined on the rally. Volume on the stock exchange totaled 2,213,516 shares, compared with 3,337,620 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks advanced 1.9 points to 68.3.

Gas Selling Explained.

Consolidated Gas broke through 26 to the lowest level recorded for the present shares and closed 27⅛, off 2⅜. Selling was attributed to disappointment over the corporation's second-quarter earnings report, showing a much wider drop in net income than in gross compared with the like 1933 period.

Selling spread to other utility issues, including American Telephone, but they offered better resistance. American Telephone duplicated its 1934 low at 107¾, then rallied a little to close 2 points lower.

Rail, motor, metal and farm shares staged a brisk comeback as distress selling in those groups around the opening proved to be less than had been expected and the steep decline in prices the last few sessions resulted in a larger volume of buying. Short covering gave impetus to the rally.

Sugar Refining Rebounds.

American Sugar Refining rebounded 5 points. U. S. Smelting closed 4¼ higher. Bethlehem Steel preferred spurted for a net gain of 4 points on the declaration of a $1.75 dividend on the issue, the first payment in two years.

General Motors, Chyrsler, American Can, Montgomery Ward, U. S. Steel, American Smelting, Allied Chemical, Santa Fe, New York Central, Du Pont, General Electric and other prominent issues were 1 to about 3 points higher at the end of the day.

Traders were less cautious in following the rally on the hope the market might make a stand around the October low points, broken by a small margin in the previous session.

Earnings Aid Markets.

Second quarter corporate and June railroad earnings statements contributed to a fairly crowded news budget, but evoked mixed response. Rail statements on the whole continued to show a trend toward smaller net income as the result of higher operating costs.

Trade commentators retained a moderately cheerful tone, noting that retail trade in most sections of the country remained 5 to 20 per cent above levels a year ago in the face of the heat in the West and drought devastation.

Foreign exchanges firmed agatinst the dollar as war fears were scouted.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Pollyanna Statements of Administration Members This Week Remind One of the Old "Recovery-Is-Just-Around-the-Corner" Tactics.

By Ralph West Robey.

In the last few days many people have commented on the similarity of the tactics being pursued by the present Administration and the antics of Washington spokesmen back in the old "prosperity-is-just-around-the-corner" days. The cause of the comments has been the issuance of statements designed to sustain confidence in the face of bad business reports and falling markets.

Thus, last Monday all the papers made much ado over the opinion of Leon Henderson, chief of the NRA planning and research division, to the effect that the Government should "gamble" on less than the usual slump in business this summer and a substantial recovery this fall. The basis of this opinion, it was explained, are various "homely indicators." Two of these were that women are buying more living room rugs and that in one city the number of bachelors has declined from 29,000 to 22,000—"the expert conclusion being that men with funds are less fearful of marriage."

On Wednesday, Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities Exchange Corporation, gave a radio talk in which he leaned over backwards to assure traders they have nothing to fear. "No honest man—no decent institution which seeks to render service instead of merely achieving profit—need fear," Mr. Kennedy said, "the regulations that have been set up. * * * There is no vindictiveness in its interpretation, no concealed punishment for those who must live under it." Further, "It is true today that business is better than confidence" and that it is a part of the task of the commission to "reassure capital as to its safety in going ahead. * * * *"

Yesterday, a third of the Pollyanna statements was issued. The securities commission, it is said, expects the exchange authorities to investigate who started the war rumors that put the stock market on the skids Thursday. And the commission itself, it is stated, immediately "commenced a study of recent market operations to determine if any manipulative or improper influences had been exerted."

Public Takes Fright at Statements Belied by Facts.

It is not sufficient to say that such statements do not do any good. They are worse than that. They do genuine harm. They undermine confidence.

For the public knows that the business decline this summer has been more than seasonal. It knows that we are faced with the worst drought in 50 years. It knows that there are disturbing labor troubles from one end of the country to the other. And it knows that the European situation is serious.

In the face of these facts it is in no mood to be patted on the head by bureau chiefs and told not to worry, that everything is rosy. It wants to have an honest, expert appraisal in which it can have confidence.

In his inaugural address President Roosevelt said: "This is preeminently the time to speak the truth, the whole truth, frankly and boldly . . . the only thing we have to fear is fear itself . . ." That conclusion is just as sound today as it was on March 4, 1933. It should be borne in mind by members of the Administration when they start talking about business conditions and the causes of a decline of stock prices.

Wool Market.

Boston, July 27 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Ohio and similar fleeces were quieter than earlier in the week, and quotations were not as firm as they appeared a week or two ago. Abut 31 cents in the grease was all that could be obtained for strictly combing 58s, 60s. ½ blood, and some was sold at that price as compared with the asking prices ranging up to 32 cents. Limited quantities of strictly combing 56s, ⅜ blood sold occasionally at mostly the low side of the range 32@33 cents in the grease. Lower grades were inactive with nominal quotations unchanged.

Goods Markets.

New York, July 27 (AP).—Cotton gray goods moved in minor quantities today as second-hands continued to offer minor quantities at slight concessions under first-hand lists. Colored goods and other finished cloths were quiet. Presence of inquiry against Federal bids brought cheer to some sections of the trade. Silk fabrics were quiet. The woolen trade was between seasons and buying sparingly. Burlaps wre quiet.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A generally good undertone was evident on the stock exchange today, but trading was cautious in view of the continental situation. Bear covering and the better Wall street opening advanced transatlantic issues. Paris bought its favorites, while investors supported gilt-edged securities, but sold home rails owing to the disappointing traffic advices. Austrian and Hungarian bonds were weak. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Prices on the bourse recovered strength as fear in regard to immediate effects of the Austrian situation lessened. Rentes, domestic and international issues and industrial shares were higher. The closing was firm.

Bond Market Mounts Under Lead of Rails

New York, July 27 (AP).—The bond market made some strides toward recovery today, with carrier issues setting the pace. Governments were mixed and the foreign section steady.

The turnover aggregated $18,814,000, par value, compared with $21,473,000 on Thursday, and of this amount Government issues comprised about $8,260,000, the heaviest turnover in months. The Standard Statistics Co. average of 60 domestic corporate issues advanced fourtenths of a point to 84.4.

The rally was attributed partly to the subsiding of European war fears, which caused the market to topple yesterday.

Rails Mount Rapidly.

Railroad bonds, including both the high-grade and secondary issues, followed the general trend of carrier stocks and mounted rapidly, as some traders and investors considered the reaction of the day before had placed them on a better basis.

Illinois Central 4¾s advanced 4 points, to 57; Southern Pacific 4½s gained 3, at 59, and Southern Railway 6½s improved 3½, at 77½.

Other rail bonds, improving 1 to 2 points, including some of the Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, International Great Northern, M-K-T, New York Central, Nickel Plate, Frisco and Wabash.

Corporate Issues Higher.

While other corporation issues were generally higher, the gains were in most cases fractional. There were some exceptions, however, including Hudson Coal 5s, International Cement 5s, Loew's debenture 6s, and Penn Dixie Cement 6s, all of which were up 1 to 2 points. Western Union 5s, International Telephone 4½s and Postal Telegraph 5s were a point or so better, while issues of American Telephone and Consolidated Gas were slightly lower.

In the Treasury group, the 3½s and 3¼s of 1944-46 gained nearly a full point and the Home Owners Loan and Federal Farm Mortgage issues were ten thirty-seconds to seventeen thirty-seconds higher.

In the foreign list Austrian 7s rallied 4¾ points to close at 66. German and Italian loans were around 1 to 2 points higher.

Cotton Losses Recovered as Shorts Buy

October Sells at 12.86 as General Market Rises 14 to 18 Points.

New York, July 27 (AP).—Yesterday's losses were more than recovered in the cotton market today.

Shorts appeared disappointed by the failure of weather reports to show more general rains in the Southwest, and the better tone of the grain and stock markets helped.

December contracts after selling up to 13.02 early, reacted partially but closed at 12.98 or within 4 points of the best, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 14 to 18 points.

The opening was firm at an advance of 4 to 12 points and active months sold 15 to 19 points net higher during the early trading on trade buying and covering. There was some selling by Liverpool and continental houses and a little selling for Southern account, but the offerings were readily absorbed with the advance soon extending to 12.90 for October, and 13.20 for May.

Demand Tapers Off.

The demand tapered off around these figures, and October slid off to about 12.78 and March to 13.06. Prices stiffened up again in the last half hour, however, and closing quotations were about unchanged to 4 points lower as compared with the best prices of the day.

The detailed weather reports for the Houston district showed some further showers but they were confined chiefly to the Southern and Central sections while no rain was reported in the Oklahoma district except for .02 of an inch at one station, and the showers reported in the Little Rock district came in for comparatively little comment. Some further reports of crop damage along the Texas coast were received.

Exports today, 6,294, making 7,635,680 so far this season. Port receipts, 12,091. U. S. port stocks, 2,473,400.

Liverpool Is Unsettled.

The early cables from Liverpool reported an unsettled market there with some continental and local selling due to the European political uncertainties or yesterday's reports of rain in Texas, which was absorbed by Bombay and scattered buying. The selling through Liverpool and continental houses early was believed to be based entirely on the differences which were widened out by the opening advance here.

Reports from Washington that if crop prospects fell below allotments, the provisions of the Bankhead act might not be enforced this season, attracted some attention but were not generally mentioned as an immediate market factor.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was irregular but price changes were narrow and unimportant, with the undertone generally steady on the steadiness of grains. Final prices were 1 point lower to 2 points net higher. Sales were 24 contracts including an exchange of September to January at 29 points. Bleachable spot nominal. August closed 5.95, September 5.95, October 5.98, December 6.19, January 6.23.

Stetson Planning To Pay Creditors

New York, July 27 (AP).—John B. Stetson, jr., partner of the investment banking firm of Stetson & Blackman, following action by Judge William H. Kirkpatrick in the United States District Court at Philadelphia yesterday instructing the receivers to turn over all assets of the firm to Mr. Stetson, announced that payment to creditors will be made in about ten days.

All creditors of the firm have made complete assignment of their claims to him, Mr. Stetson stated, under a plan to procure early distribution of assets, and action of the court today gives effect to the plan.

The firm, which has been in receivership since September of last year, were members of the New York Stock Exchange and other exchanges. Mr. Stetson is a son of the founder of the hat company of that name, and was United States Minister to Poland from 1924 to 1929.

3 Prisoners Flee Keyser, W. Va., Jail

Keyser, W. Va., July 27 (Spl.).—Three men escaped from the Keyser Jail about 4 a. m. today by using saws.

They are Joseph Sanders, under sentence of two years in the penitentiary for robbing the filling station of Warren Boggs, New Creek Drive; Ray M. Davis, alias Robert Logue, charged with holding up Peyton Kitsmiller, near Elk Garden; Robert Helmick, Ridgeley, charged with stealing Baltimore & Ohio property.

Sheriff F. G. Davis thinks the saws were obtained by Sanders, who had been taken out on several occasions to recover stolen property.

Retired Banker, 83, Dies in Philadelphia

Frederick, Md., July 27 (Spl.).—Word was received here today of the death of William McCurdy Hardt, 83, a native of this city and prominent in Philadelphia banking circles.

When a young man he became associated with Farmers and Mechanics National Bank of this city, and later became National bank examiner working from the office of the Comptroller of Currency, Washington. His duties took him to Philadelphia, where he became a special bank examiner of the clearing house association, a position he held until he retired several years ago.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Evil Mixture.

When gasoline is mixed with booze there is a call for wrecking crews, for motor cars are ditched, like missiles by a Vulcan pitched, and in the ruins there may be some human wreckage sad to see, some motorists with broken slats and injured necks and damaged hats, and ambulances will survive to bear off tourists once alive. The coroner will buy new shoes, when gasoline is mixed with boze; and he will feel he can afford the richest viands for his board, and to his wife and daughter Maud he'll hand a large and bulging wad, and bid them seek the dry goods stores, and blow themselves on all ten floors. And he'll desert his cheap abode, and buy that place up the road. There'll always be much front page news when gasoline is mixed with booze; the city editor will say, "There's been a smash-up down the way; five cars are piled up in a heap; the wreckage is some ten feet deep; so scoot, ye terriers, and bring the low-down on this frightful thing." Then brisk reporters, in a row, will hit the high spots as they go. The calm mortician will enthuse, when gasoline is mixed with booze. Now he can buy imported cars, imported neckties and cigars. The surgeon with his cross-cut saw a princely income now will draw; the sexton will fine garments choose, when gasoline is mixed with booze.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Fraternal Plans — By Harry J. Tuthill

WELL BOYS, WE DID A GOOD DAY'S WORK NOTIFYING THE HONEST ELEMENT OF THE LODGE ABOUT THE MEETING AND TRIAL HERE NEXT WEEK.
SUPPOSE, AFTER WE FIND THOSE BOLSHEVIKI GUILTY OF BURNING THE LODGE HALL THEY CLAIM THEY DIDN'T GET A FAIR TRIAL?
NOT SO LOUD, BOYS.
O.K. GEORGE.
DID THEY GIVE OUR BROTHER AND PAL A FAIR TRIAL WHEN THEY FIXED HIM SO THE ONLY MEMENTO LEFT OF BENNY IS THAT SET OF FALSE TEETH WE FOUND IN THE ASHES?
SUPPOSE THE BOLSHEVIKI CLAIM THEY SHOULD BE PRESENT AT THE TRIAL?
WE'LL APPOINT SOMEBODY TO DEFEND THEM. SOMEBODY REAL DUMB.
THERE'S THAT EGG UPSTAIRS HAMMERING ON THE FLOOR AGAIN.
ONE OF US OUGHT TO BE THE JUDGE TO MAKE SURE THERE'S NO BAD BUSTS.
WE'LL DO EVERYTHING ACCORDING TO THE BY-LAWS. WE KNOW THEY'RE GUILTY BUT TO SHOW WE'RE VERY BROAD-MINDED WE'LL GIVE THEM A TRIAL.
WE'LL HEAR BOTH SIDES BEFORE THROWING THEM OUT OF THE LODGE.
THERE'S THE PHONE. IT MUST BE THOSE DIZZY NEIGHBORS AGAIN. LET IT RING. EH GEORGE?

SHOO!
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1934, by The Chicago Tribune.
A FEW YEARS AGO WE HAD THE CROP OF MOSQUITOES- YOU SHOULD HAVE BEEN HERE THEN- THERE WAS ONE BIG BOSS MOSQUITO THAT USED TO AMUSE HIMSELF- JUST KEEPING EAGLES OFF THE FARM- WHY WE HAD TO PUT WEIGHTS ON THE PIGS' LEGS TO KEEP THEM FROM BEING CARRIED AWAY- I SAW ONE BIG ORNERY MOSQUITO BITE HIS WAY RIGHT THROUGH A RAIL FENCE- HE WAS TOO LAZY TO FLY OVER IT-

DICK TRACY — Reporting In

7-28
HUH! THERE THEY ARE! ALL READY FOR THE POLICE! ALL READY AND WAITING! AND THIS TIME THE POLICE SHOULDN'T HAVE ANY TROUBLE GETTING THEM.
HEADQUARTERS! THAT'S WHERE I'LL GO. I'LL MAKE A FULL REPORT TO THE CHIEF-TO MR. TRACY- AND WATCH THEIR EYES POP...
CHESTER GOULD
MR. TRACY? THIS IS MR. BUMPSTED'S NURSE. HE ASKED ME TO CALL AND SAY THAT HIS MOTHER'S BEEN MISSING FROM THE HOUSE FOR ABOUT TWO HOURS AND HE'S VERY WORRIED. YES- THANK YOU- HE'LL BE LOOKING FOR YOU.

WINNIE WINKLE, the Breadwinner — Fathaw's Head Aches

WHEW! I DUNNO WHAT'S WRONG WITH ME, WINNIE!! I BEEN HAVIN' HOT SWEATS ALL DAY LONG!!
MAYBE IT'S FROM SOMETHING YOU'VE EATEN!?!
JULY 28
WELL, ALL I BEEN EATIN' IS FISH!! THAT'S ALL THEY SERVE AT THIS HOTEL — THREE TIMES A DAY!!
WELL, MAYBE THE FISH GAVE YOU THE FEVER!!
WELL, THEN YOU MUST HAVE BRAIN FEVER!!
